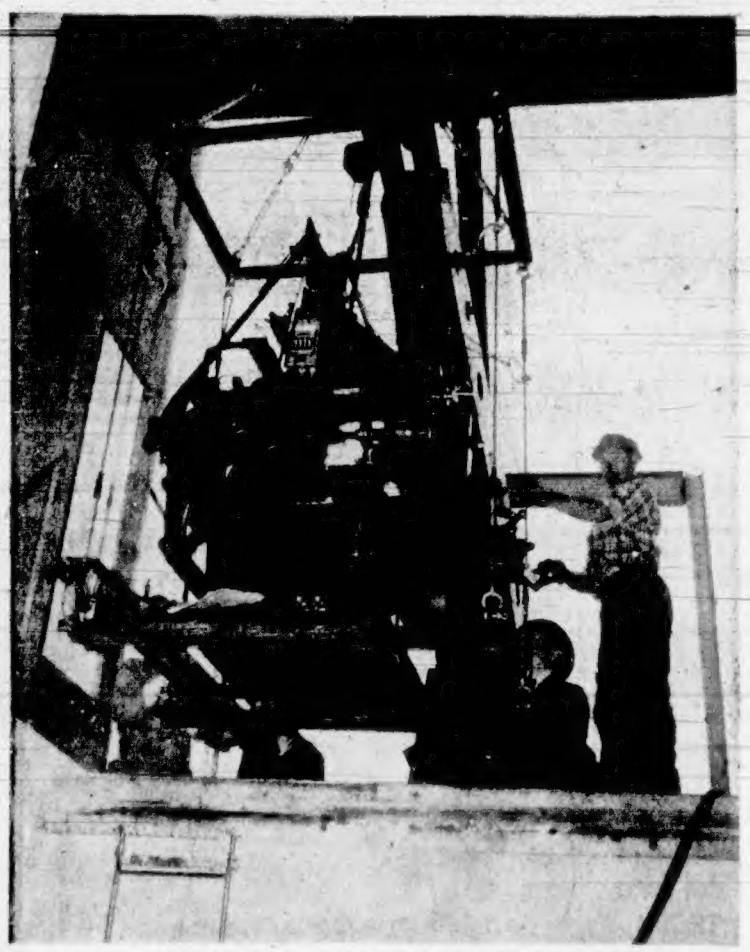
Giant Cranes Move Still-Hot Machines



First of 168 tons of machines and equipment is eased to lower-floor composing room of giant Victoria Press Ltd. building. Machine is an Intertype—machine used to set heads for stories. It was followed by Linotypes, stereotype equipment, metal pots, banks of type and all the gear that is part of newspaper production. Equipment was to be moved from downtown locations of Daily Colonist and rival Times without either paper missing an edition.

Giant Goss press was ready to roll in new Victoria Press Ltd. building this week-end. Skilled machinists and helpers have worked seven weeks under charge of Seattle expert to install huge press. Helper Emil Roberge late yesterday conceded press was about ready.

Chinese Fail to Find Hole in Allied Line For Second Punch

Weight of Probing Force Shifts to Eastern Front

TOKYO, May 6 (Sunday) (INS).—Chinese Communist forces probing for a weak spot in United Nations lines shifted to the East Korean front today but the Reds failed to find an opening for the second round of their Spring offensive.

The Communists sent a powerful probing force of up to 800 men against South Korean lines near Inje where the Republicans stood their ground in a bitter five-hour fight and forced the Reds to fall back.

On the Western front, an Allied tank task force re-entered Uijongbu to find the Chinese gone.

Only scattered bands of Communist soldiers remained in the area, which strategists consider the gateway to Seoul.

Patrols moved out to the north, east and west of the "Ridgway Line" above Seoul. In an area northwest of the old South Korean capital, they engaged elements of two enemy regiments. The Reds resisted stubbornly.

United Nations airmen warned that the Red slowdown on the battlefront did not indicate the Communists were giving up the fight. They reported more than 2,570 vehicles poured down North Korean roads under the cover of darkness to reinforce and resupply embattled comrades on the front.

Planes destroyed at least 140 of the supply vehicles and took a toll of about 175 men, pilots claimed.

On the ground, Allied soldiers added 1,255 Red soldiers to the Communist casualty list and captured an additional 57.

The casualty-ridden Communist armies now have pulled back from their siegehold around Seoul, and evidently are in retreat on the central front as well.

Whether or not they could renew their attack seemed predicated on whether they could resupply their troops. But—even cover of darkness brought them no respite from round-the-clock aerial bombardment.

Fifth Air Force jets, Navy and Marine planes struck at the Red supply routes when a low cloud bank lifted over the peninsula. As darkness fell, B-26 night intruders continued the attack.

Far Eastern Air Force claimed that highways were cut in 40 places Saturday as planes mounted 675 sorties. Even giant B-29 Superforts joined the aerial assault aimed at stalling any future enemy attack.

Longest Game Without Score

A late check of available record books this morning disclosed that yesterday afternoon's game between Victoria Athletics and Salem Senators probably set a new record for organized baseball of consecutive scoreless innings. The Senators won it, 1-0, in the 23rd inning. (See details, page 14.)

The official Baseball Guide lists the longest major league game as 26 innings — between Brooklyn and Boston on May 1, 1920. However, the score was 1-1. The longest 1-0 game listed went 18 innings. It happened twice—on August 17, 1882, between Providence and Detroit, and on May 15, 1918, between Washington and Chicago.

The longest scoreless game went 19 innings, between Brooklyn and Cincinnati, on September 11, 1946.

Old Lady Padlocks Broad Street Door

By G. E. MORTIMORE

The Colonist tower looks down on an empty building today as the Old Lady of Broad Street closes a half-century chapter in her long career.

Moving crews this morning are completing the transfer of The Colonist from the building this newspaper has occupied during 53 of its 93 years, to a new $1,000,000 plant near Fountain Circle. The Colonist will share mechanical equipment with The Victoria Daily Times, the afternoon newspaper published here. Advertising offices will operate as a unit.

But competition between The Colonist and its younger neighbor will not slacken, as each newspaper strives to be first in news and features.

OLDEST ON COAST

The Colonist is the oldest daily newspaper on the Pacific Coast. The half-century it has spent in the Broad Street plant includes some of its years of fastest growth.

In that period it has grown to be the paper with the largest circulation on Vancouver Island—a circulation greater than that of all other Island dailies combined. It has built a proud name which is second to none in its field.

Many old-timers and many younger hands, too, will feel the wrench of the move.

"This place is like home to me," says Charles Chislett, Colonist composing-room superintendent, who has worked for The Colonist for more than 50 years altogether.

STARTED IN 1886

He started work as a messenger boy for The Colonist in 1896. He started his apprenticeship as a printer with a Victoria afternoon paper.

His father made him quit because that newspaper's policy was too biased toward the political party Mr. Chislett, Senior, didn't like. Charlie went to work for The Colonist.

(The Colonist has been known for some time as an independent newspaper without political prejudice.)

Mr. Chislett worked for a time on United States newspapers, then returned to Victoria. Since then he has been with The Colonist for a solid 44 years.

OLDEST EMPLOYEE

His service is exceeded only by that of Frederick Thomas, 87, long-time foreman of the lithograph department, who served The Colonist for 63 years. He has been succeeded as foreman by his son, Charles Thomas. The experience of Mr. Thomas, Senior, goes back to the days of engraving on stone.

The Colonist moved to Broad Street in 1898 from the Government Street site where the Churchill Hotel now stands. The four-story red-brick structure with the tower which formed the nucleus of The Colonist buildings on Broad Street was put up by A. G. Sargison and associates at a cost of $35,000.

A series of additions and alterations brought the building

All Colonist Units In Service Monday

ALL departments of The Daily Colonist will be open for business Monday in the new $1,000,000 building at Douglas and Hillside.

An office will be maintained in the old Broad Street building for business, job printing and advertising. If necessary, announcements, news items and pictures may be left at the Broad Street office for the news, sports and social departments.

On Monday all the present telephone numbers will be used. The Douglas Street switchboard will be linked with the office to be maintained on Broad Street.

Until 11:30 a.m. today these phone numbers will be available:

Circulation: E 4111 and E 4112.

General office: E 4115.

Sports, social and newsroom: E 4113 and E 4114.

Credit Gloucester Stand With Breaking Red Drive

SOMEWHERE IN KOREA, May 5 (Reuters).—Intelligence reports suggested today that one heroic, three-day stand by a British Battalion—the famous 1st Royal Gloucesters here—dammed the flood of the Red Chinese offensive two weeks ago.

The Chinese were reported still licking their wounds and trying to rebuild the centre-piece of their attack—the forces which broke against the Gloucesters.

The battalion, part of the British 29th Brigade, is back in the Allied line now—what is left of it.

Between 500 and 600 men of the battalion are believed to have died fighting on that bloody battlefield south of the Imjin River. Only 40 or 50 got back.

It is known that the highest quarters of the United States army have asked for a report on the action.

The Gloucesters stuck to their positions until it was too late for them to withdraw. They refused to retreat or surrender until, after three days and nights of desperate fighting, without food or water, they were over-run.

U.K. Backing Reds, MacArthur Charges

WASHINGTON, May 5 (AP).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, an old soldier, with a burning cause rested his case before Senate investigators tonight. He uttered this final warning: The free world is "doomed to destruction" if it fails to crush completely the Communist threat in Korea.

The five-star general wound up three days of virtually constant testimony at 6 p.m. with a new blast at President Truman, denying he ever violated a Presidential order and declaring he never got a firm, workable plan from Washington to carry on the Korean war.

"I felt in all conscience," Gen. MacArthur said, "I could not go on ordering men to their deaths by the thousands in such a complete vacuum of policy decision."

Gen. MacArthur likewise assailed what he called Britain's "complete support" of Red China, declaring it not only runs counter to the United States' best interests but "involves the very life of this nation."

"CUTTING THROATS"

He added that the British "are cutting their own throats in following the plans they have of such complete support of Red China and the complete support of the giving of Formosa into the hands of a potential Red enemy."

Purchase Of Building Confirmed

By Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA, May 5.—The Royal Canadian Air Force is acquiring the Begg Building in Victoria on Yates and Quadra Streets, National Defence headquarters disclosed tonight.

(The disclosure confirms reports received in Victoria during the past week.)

The purchase price is $100,000 and the necessary order-in-council will be put through Cabinet shortly.

MAJOR CHANGES

The congested situation of headquarters for the Work Point Barracks and the Esquimalt naval station is also being studied. Some changes of a major character are under consideration, but no decision has been made.

Four Persons Slightly Hurt In Collision

A Sooke family of four received slight injuries yesterday in a collision between their light sedan and a B.C. Electric Co. bus near Craigflower Bridge.

Taken to Jubilee Hospital were Henry J. Helgesen and his young son, Terence. His wife and a second child were treated and released from Naden Hospital shortly after the accident.

CAR RUINED

The Helgesen car was considered a total loss by R.C.M.P. The front end of the Gorge-Admirals bus, driven by Thomas W. Day, 1015 Dunsmuir, received minor damage. The lone passenger in the bus was not injured in the crash.

A B.C. Electric spokesman said, owing to a new schedule, Saturday was the last day that the Gorge-Admirals bus would cross the bridge before returning to town.

Athabaskan Due Back Home May 17

The destroyer H.M.C.S. Athabaskan will arrive at Esquimalt May 17, naval sources announced last night.

Athabaskan, along with the destroyers Sioux and Cayuga, left this base last July 5 for service with the United Nations. The Sioux returned last February 4, and the Cayuga followed her about two months later.

Sioux has returned to the fighting zone and a short time ago relieved the Athabaskan.

It is presumed the Athabaskan will make a brief stopover at Pearl Harbor for refueling. Most likely she will be at that big American base next Thursday or Friday, and then make the long last lap.

Most U.N. Members Ready to Impose Direct Sanctions Against Red China

LAKE SUCCESS, N.Y., May 5 (INS).—A canvass of United Nations opinion indicated tonight great strides have been made in developing majority consent for bombing the Manchurian "privileged sanctuary" and clamping an arms embargo on all of Red China.

This Lake Success development parallels a stiffening opposition to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's demand for outright war against the Chinese Mainland.

It is an open secret now that United Nations supreme commander Lieut.-General Matthew B. Ridgway already has the authority to "dog fight" all over Manchurian skies any time that Mao-Tse-tung orders into action the swift air squadrons given him by Russia.

STRAFING LATER

MacArthur's successor later perhaps can send his planes into Manchuria to bomb and strafe enemy air bases.

If such action is taken to smash a Chinese Communist air attack not an eyebrow would be lifted at Lake Success—except by India and the Soviet bloc countries. Delegates of those lands were the only ones who did so when United Nations forces again crossed the 38th Parallel weeks ago.

It also is certain that within four or five weeks the United Nations will make a formal Assembly proclamation of a strict arms embargo on Red China "to prevent the killing of a single United Nations soldier by bullets manufactured in free lands."

This would be a natural follow-up of the Assembly action that branded the Peiping Government an aggressor in Korea.

New Home, But Same Policy

To Appear Before Commission

Contractor Says Fraud Loss $60,000

Robert M. Betts, Happy Valley roofing contractor who says he and his late father lost more than $60,000 to swindlers here, will appear Monday before the Victoria Police Commission.

He will be one of four persons to give information they hope will lead to recovery of some $95,000.

Mayor Percy George, Police Commission chairman, has said he will instruct Police Chief John Blackstock to seek the aid of the Attorney-General's Department in initiating a full-scale probe to trace money handled by confidence man Clyde Gillies.

Recently sentenced to a total of ten years in prison, Gillies is now believed to have been a key figure in a swindling ring which has bilked a number of Island and Mainland residents of upwards of $100,000 during the last ten years.

ENTRUSTED TO GILLIES

In an affidavit sworn here last March, Mr. Betts said his father, a retired, well-to-do Prairie farmer, told him he had entrusted the management and investment of property, bonds and other assets valued at $60,000 to Gillies.

His father, who died in 1946, left a total estate valued at approximately $1,600, to be divided among his three children, Mr. Betts stated.

City lots worth between $25,000 and $30,000, and some farmland at Rimbey, Alta., were among properties turned over to Gillies by his father, according to Mr. Betts.

Mr. Betts said that after coming here from Alberta in 1939 to join his father, he himself, acting on his father's advice, entrusted Gillies with $1,200 in cash on the understanding that Gillies would use the money to buy him a small retail store.

The contractor stated that Gillies never gave him an accounting for the money, and, so far as he knew, never invested it as agreed.

According to William A. Scott, Victoria man whom an Assize jury last month found had been defrauded of $9,000 by Gillies and former city barrister J. Percival Walls, and initiator of the move to hold a full-scale investigation, Mr. Betts' affidavit is among documents already submitted to city police and the Attorney-General's Department.

Mr. Scott will appear at Monday's police commission meeting. So will Mrs. Edith Bourne, elderly Victoria widow whom Gillies admitted robbing of $3,445, and Mrs. Elizabeth Page, 73, also a widow, who claims to have turned over to Gillies a $9,000 estate.

ALL ABOARD

By G. E. Mortimore

Only yesterday I stood in The Colonist composing room and saw the men in shirt sleeves and eye shades bent over their tinkling Linotypes, setting the day's news. I have seen our shop at work a thousand times, and so has everybody else who works for The Colonist.

But yesterday I looked more closely and saw some things I hadn't seen before—the grimy skylight, the last old gas lamp [illegible] years ago.

I paid more attention because I was seeing it all for the last time. One's eyes get sharper then.

Those men and machines handled news, which is the most fleeting of commodities. And yet they seemed so fixed and permanent.

Last night they trundled away into the darkness, leaving the old Broad Street plant to silence and dust.

The printers were still at work when the moving men began to heave the machinery through the hole which had been punched in the wall, and lower it to the street.

But finally the last story was set and proof-read, the last page form was locked and hurried into the stereotype room. The shift was over. In printers' slang, "the jig was up."

Some people say that printers don't care whether they are setting news or the telephone book. Some people say that newspaper reporters and editors are flinty churls who will sell their hearts for cash.

If this is true, why did so many of us sneak back for a last look at the old place? Nobody paid us overtime for that.

* * *

When I first came to work for The Colonist, I had the idea of going up in the tower to look down on the rooftops. But the years slipped by and somehow I never did.

Only on the last day, when it was almost too late. I made the trip through the composing room and the commercial bindery, up ladders coated with ancient grime and through trapdoors to the high perch just above those words, "Established 1858."

Newsmen who worked before half of us were born once stood up there and spotted fires, watched ships dock and gazed out on a very different Victoria.

It was a fine view. I wish I could go up there again.

* * *

Down in the city room, old landmarks have been disappearing for several days now. The first to go was the pneumatic tube which carried copy upstairs. That was taken away early in the week by the same man who had installed it 25 years before.

On Friday I glanced up toward the electric wall clock. It wasn't there. A dusty circle of lighter-colored plaster marked the place where it had hung. During the day I saw several people look at the vacant space repeatedly, and snap their fingers when they realized their error. Habits are hard to break.

Marine reporter Ray Wormald assembled over several years a gallery of pin-ups, gags, cartoons and irrelevant headlines which covered the whole wall above his desk. On Friday he tore them all down and threw them in the waste basket.

Up and down the old stairs which have been worn by the feet of a generation of reporters, burly cartage men have been humping cardboard boxes full of familiar things.

* * *

In the press room early this morning, the Hoe press which has served here for 37 years rolled off the last copies of The Colonist which will ever be published from Broad Street.

Maybe it was silly to creep down there and watch it. People who follow this trade disclaim any emotional interest in such matters.

But this was the last day, the last chance, the end of an era. The new press that runs Tuesday morning will be bigger, faster and better. But it won't be the same.

Legal Aid System of Victoria Bar Group Rouses Interest in Cities Across Land

Victoria Bar Association's legal aid system, believed to be one of the best in Canada, is drawing inquiries from other Canadian centres wishing to emulate the local plan.

Donald J. Lawson, chairman of the Bar Association's legal aid committee, in his annual report said inquiries as to the nature of Victoria's legal aid system have come from many points including Saint John, N.B., Montreal and Toronto.

"We believe that the legal aid system which has been so successfully established in Vancouver has adopted almost in its entirety our own system," said Mr. Lawson.

INTERVIEWED

[illegible] plicants have been interviewed during the year. Of this number, nine were refused assistance, 22 received advice only at the interview, 40 were referred to solicitors and a few others had single letters written on their behalf.

Because all reports have not been received regarding the outcome of referred cases, Mr. Lawson said it is not possible to state what success is attributable to the efforts of the solicitors concerned.

"It might be of interest to the bar to know that in one case referred the solicitor was able to make a defence settlement of $8,000 under a damage claim. There is no doubt that the applicant could not possibly have retained counsel on his own behalf and presumably would have received nothing without the benefit of the legal aid system," reported Mr. Lawson.

In addition to civil cases, two criminal cases were undertaken at the request of the John Howard Society. In one case counsel was asked to speak to sentence, and in the other a defence was undertaken which was successful.

"During the year decisions were obtained in both County and Supreme Court that costs being an indemnity only, they cannot be recovered by a successful legal aid litigant against a losing party," said Mr. Lawson.

SLAVE TRADE

The first step in abolition of the slave trade was a British law of 1807, forbidding transport of slaves in British vessels.

Board Names Committees Of Arts Centre

Committees of the Arts Centre of Greater Victoria have been named by the board of directors.

Named to the finance committee were J. Whitehead and Walter Jeune; exhibition committee, Mrs. Ina Uhthoff, Cmdr. P. F. Fairfull, Mrs. G. Ewen, Mrs. O. Lucas; program committee, Dr. Harry Hickman, Miss Gwen Scott, Ronald Grant; house committee, Mrs. E. Seeley-Smith; social committee, Miss P. Wright; publicity committee, Kenneth McAllister, Dr. C. A. Forssander, G. P. Black, Wilfred Johns; office committee, T. T. Carpenter.

"One of the most urgent problems is to encourage members to come forward with offers to give a definite amount of time each week for the various jobs which have to be done around an arts centre," said an official.

Some major projects are proposed for the coming year and Victoria will be able to continue enjoying a full program of shows and events, he said.

VALUABLE EXPORT

Britain does a large business in export of valuable dogs, which may range as high as $1,500 for a good specimen.

Pentrelew Place
BEHIND THE SIGNS WITH Jim Nesbitt

Pentrelew Place is a comparatively new street, off Fort, between Linden Avenue and Moss Street. It was named for "Pentrelew," the historic home of the Crease family, and at one time was part of the Crease acres. Geographically, it is also named from the fact that in Cornish, Pentrelew means land sloping two ways.

Sir Henry Pering Pellew Crease is referred to today as the father of the Bar in British Columbia. He was born in 1823 at Ince Castle in Cornwall, and came to Vancouver Island in 1858.

He was for 10 years the Attorney-General in colonial days, and then was appointed a Justice of the Supreme Court, traveling frequently in the wilds of the far interior to hold court.

On his retirement from the Bench, he was knighted by Queen Victoria, and he died at Pentrelew on February 27, 1905.

Crease Avenue in Saanich is named for him.

U.S. Congress Clips Budget

WASHINGTON, May 5 (INS)—The economy drive in Congress to slash President Truman's $71,600,000,000 budget was nearing the $1,000,000,000 mark today and House members are determined to make further slashes.

The effort to balance the budget in the fiscal year beginning next July 1 must take one of two courses; Congress must find a way to trim remaining appropriation requests by about $4,000,000,000 or it must increase taxes by about $10,000,000,000 as the administration asks.

Rearmament Delays Worry U.S. Officials

EUROPE TODAY

By KINGSBURY SMITH

PARIS, May 5 (INS)—American officials in Europe are becoming seriously concerned over the question of whether Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will be able to [illegible] Atlantic Alliance army of approximately 40 divisions by July, 1952.

This growing concern is prompted by the slowness of America's Western European allies in rearmament.

One top-ranking American diplomatic official told International News Service that the European allies are doing "nowhere near enough" at present to enable the supreme commander of the North Atlantic Treaty forces to meet his target date.

BEHIND SCHEDULE

The European allies are falling behind schedule both in respect to armament production and assignment of troops to Gen. Eisenhower.

The British contend that they have been unable to meet the shortage of raw materials, machine tools and component parts hoped for time table of armament production because of the caused by the Korean conflict.

France, which was committed to make the greatest contribution to the ground forces of the Atlantic army, has not been able to supply the promised number of troops so far because of the necessity for sending reinforcements to Indo-China.

Gen. Eisenhower was hoping to have 36 European divisions assigned to him by July next year. To this number, the United States Government was prepared to add eight American divisions.

DOUBTFUL

Many observers doubt that anything like 36 divisions will be available to the supreme commander of Allied forces, Europe, by that time unless the European allies speed up their drives.

Officials do not consider justified the British contention that the rearmament programs are lagging because of lack of access to raw materials.

It is felt that in the case of Britain the issue goes much deeper, as was evidenced by the recent split in the British Government that resulted in the resignation of National Service Minister Aneurin Bevan and Board of Trade President Harold Wilson.

The fundamental issue is believed to be a difference of opinion over the danger of Russia attacking Western Europe or otherwise risking a major conflict with the west.

American defence chiefs came to the conclusion last year that Russia would be ready for war by the end of 1952. They foresaw the danger that the Soviets might be tempted to attach the west any time thereafter, unless the balance of western military power was sufficiently restored to discourage such a move.

It was on the basis of this conclusion that the foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty countries decided at the Brussels conference last December to speed up the rearmament programs.

The plan adopted at that conference called for the creation of an Atlantic army of approximately 40 divisions by July, 1952.

That has been Gen. Eisenhower's goal. He hoped that when it was achieved, he could relinquish his command and return to the United States by the end of next Summer.

The plan envisaged, of course, a heavy armament program to help supply the weapons and the equipment for the European units of the Atlantic defence force.

COSTS INCREASE

Defence budgets designed to provide the funds for these rearmament programs were adopted by most of the European allied governments.

However, the estimates in these defence budgets were disrupted by the increase in world prices of raw materials caused by the Korean war.

In order to meet the new cost of the agreed upon rearmament programs, the European Allied Governments have been faced with the problem of tightening the civilian economy belt to a point that would involve a lowering of living standards.

In Britain, it meant curtailing expenditures for such measures as the free health service.

Bevan represents the school of thought, not only in Britain but also on the Continent, that doubts that Russia will attack the west even if and when she is ready for war.

This group therefore feels that there is no need for rushing the rearmament programs at the expense of economic recovery and socialistic progress. They believed that rearmament should be limited and carried out on a gradual scale over a much longer period of time.

It is the influence of this group, including the so-called "neutralists" on the Continent, which is now threatening to slow up Gen. Eisenhower's plans for creating an Atlantic army of 40 divisions by next Summer.

Peace Emissary Walks Into War

Canada's Army Built On Simple Pattern

OTTAWA, May 5 (CP).—This is to guide those who don't know the difference between a platoon and a brigade and who may be a bit confused now that Canada is going to have the equivalent of a full division under arms.

Some thumbnail descriptions of smaller army segments:

Division—About 18,000 men divided into three infantry brigades plus supporting units of artillery, engineers, signals, medicals, ordnance, and other arms. It is commanded by a major-general.

Brigade—A group of three infantry battalions, each of about 900 men. It is commanded by a brigadier.

Brigade group—When it appears that a brigade may have to fight on its own, units which normally would be under divisional command are added to the brigade so it can operate alone. This enlarged brigade is called a brigade group.

THIRD TO COME

(Canada now has two brigade groups and is going to recruit a third. The fact they are all brigade groups means they are not to be banded together into a division. They are to be kept separate for separate jobs, the regular force Airborne Brigade Group or mobile striking force for home defence, the (Special Force) 25th Brigade Group for Korea, the new 27th Brigade Group primarily for Europe.)

Battalion—The infantry unit which is the real fighting unit of any army. It has about 900 men and is commanded by a lieutenant-colonel. It is broken down into five companies, each split into platoons which are divided into sections.

Regiment—In the infantry, a regiment is the parent unit which recruits battalions to fight—thus the 1st Battalion of the Loyal Edmonton Regiment. Armored and artillery units bear the name regiment in action.

Other units: Armor, artillery, engineers, signals, each has its own designations. Thus a tank regiment is broken down into squadrons, squadrons into troops. Artillery regiments are broken down into batteries, and batteries into troops. Unless Canada has to go to war, you don't have to worry about corps or armies. But a corps includes two or more divisions. An army, in the field, includes two or more corps.

The army also uses the term corps to designate an arm of the service—such as infantry or armored corps.

And one last tip. Canada's new brigade group will be called the 27th. That doesn't mean there are 26 other brigades in the regular army. It is connected, however, with the number of brigades in the army as a whole, that is both regular and reserve.

The regular army is a full-time affair. The reserve army units normally muster two nights a week.

Tenth Year Recalls Hess Flight

LONDON, May 6 (AP).—Ten years ago next Thursday Rudolf Hess literally dropped in on Britain with the odd notion that he could end the World War.

The No. 3 Nazi, outranked only by Hitler and Goering, arrived by parachute in a field near Glasgow. The plane he had piloted in a crazy flight from Augsburg, Germany, crashed in flames a few hundred yards away.

Hess, his ankle broken, spoke vaguely of a plan to "oust the Churchill clique," and was deeply embittered because the British Government did not take him seriously.

His coming gripped the world's attention, but after ten years, the anniversary of his strange adventure stirs little interest in Britain. In Berlin's Spandau prison, Hess, now 57, is almost a forgotten man. He was sentenced to life imprisonment by the War Crimes Tribunal.

His keepers report he is in "reasonably good physical condition," but it is understood that "he is not always in the world of reality."

Hess first was held a prisoner in Britain but gave little of value to the Intelligence Service, and many officers concluded that, toward the end, Hitler hadn't told him much. But his rambling conversation suggested that Germany might attack Russia soon, and the tip undoubtedly was useful to the Russians.

At Spandau now he does little jobs, with a hoe in the garden and broom in the corridors, and reads a great deal.

Red Foreign Legion Training

LAKE SUCCESS, N.Y., May 5 (INS).—Chinese Nationalist underground intelligence reports a Russian-controled international Communist legion of 200,000 is being trained in Manchuria for Korean fighting.

Information is that, as of February 28, an international "freedom and liberation" legion was established by Moscow and Peiping in two units; a first-line field [illegible]

Backbone of the first-line force, reportedly to reach the Korean battlefield early this Summer to replace Chinese regular army divisions, amounts to 12 field divisions of 15,000 troops each, made up of reorganized Chinese Communist forces.

Five North Korean divisions make up the next integral part [illegible] corps composed of Chinese, Mongolians, North Koreans and some scattered European groups. The Formosa agents number 200 medium and heavy Russian tanks among their equipment, more on the way.

Headquarters of the international army is said to be in Mukden.

The reserves are four full-strength Soviet divisions. Nationalists believe the Russian divisions have been posted in Manchuria as guarantee against trouble there.

Commander-in-chief is Russian Gen. Karenkov, said to have served on the Tokyo Allied Commission. His deputy is Chinese Gen. Peng Teh-huai.

In command of the first-line field force is Chinese Gen. Liang Shung. His three deputies are a Russian, a Korean and a Mongolian general.

The reserve has five divisions of cavalry with Chinese, North [illegible] and Japanese riders.

There is one Soviet artillery division, five Chinese, North Korean and Japanese divisions, plus units of Polish and Czech artillery.

The air force has five squadrons of 96 planes each, piloted by Russians, North Koreans and Japanese, plus a separate squadron of Russian-flown jets.

[illegible]oots to Blame

[illegible]lder, Wetter Decades On Way for Large Area

By JOHN B. KNOX

BOSTON, May 6 (AP).—There's a colder, wetter 15 or 20 years in your future.

That is, if you are a North American, a European or an Asiatic and if you don't live in certain special places.

Hurd C. Willett, professor of meteorology at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology has studied 200 years of sunspot cycles and weather. Using a weather yardstick constructed of what's happened in the past, he has come up with a long range forecast.

Willett's "extrapolation of sunspot-climate relationships" appears in the American Meteorological Society's Journal of Meteorology.

"The temperature level over much of the world," he says, "will fall significantly during the next 15 years, probably reaching a first minimum level during 1960-1965."

DRY TO WET

"The rainfall in lower middle latitudes, south of 50 degrees north, will be substantially higher during the next 20 years, particularly in those regions which were driest between 1920-1940."

"The general recent recession of glaciers in all regions is due to be reversed in the very near future.

"This temperature fall will be sharpest where the anomalous (abnormal) warmth of the last 25 years has been most extreme.

EXCEPTIONS

"Exceptions to this downward trend may be noted in the Antarctic, the interior of Western Canada, the Northwestern United States and particularly from the Eastern Mediterranean northeastward into Russia."

All this, according to Willett, is because we are heading for a period of reduced sunspot activity.

Recipe for Health

A prescription is a recipe for health. It represents a physician's scientific diagnosis and careful decision as to the best method of treating a particular illness. The responsibility imposed upon a physician in diagnosing illness and prescribing treatment is equal to the value given life. Second only to the responsibility of the physician is the responsibility of the pharmacist who compounds and dispenses the prescribed medication. This is a responsibility which we are well prepared to accept. We consider it a privilege to serve.

A Last Look From the Colonist Tower

FIFTY-THREE years ago The Daily Colonist, having moved progressively uptown from Wharf Street to Bastion and on to Government, set about publication in what was then its handsome new building at 1211 Broad Street, featured by the Colonist tower. More than five decades of great upheaval in the world, with peace and war, good times and depressions alternating in kaleidoscopic changes, have witnessed also the continued prosperity and growth of this community and of the people who are its staunchest asset. Once again having outgrown its shell this paper is on the march to new and better quarters. This Sunday issue is the last that will roll off the old presses on Broad Street. Tuesday editions of The Colonist will be printed on the big, powerful press in the handsome new quarters at 2631 Douglas Street. It will be the same Colonist to its friends.

From the Colonist tower at the turn of the century reporters used to watch the galloping horses of the Victoria Fire Department as the alarm bell clanged out a fire warning by ward and box number. From the same spot ships from the Orient would be watched on their arrival at William Head. In Summer smoke from forest fires was traced to its origin from this lookout point. By night and by day the old tower looked out upon this community and all that it did, part of the original city skyline. Though the telephone and modern communications have long superseded this means the tower has been an affectionate remembrance for successive generations of working newspapermen.

Our most precious asset—the one thing that cannot be packed in boxes or trucked anywhere, but which can only be borne by the men and women serving this paper—is our good will. That has been earned the hard way by trial and error, but always with the open and honest desire to serve this community well. It is in evidence among subscribers who have taken this paper daily since pioneer times. It warms with the knowledge that we have not only subscribers in steadily climbing volume, but trusted friends. Were it otherwise rggret at leaving familiar and loved surroundings would be much sharper than it is. So the most precious burdens that this paper will move to its new quarters today are its character and the public's good will.

Can B.C. Escape Means Test Altogether?

WITH all provinces now agreeable to the surrender of their jurisdiction in pensions matters, the way has been cleared for a formal amendment of the B.N.A. Act to centralize pensions administration under Federal authority. It has taken a long time to bring about this needed reform, for the problems of devising a formula for a country as large as Canada and with such a diversity of factors among provinces did not lend themselves to any simple solution. Not all of them have been solved yet; the basis of contribution remains to be decided.

One of the chief difficulties which had to be overcome was that of the much-condemned means test. By next year, however, a uniform pension of $40 for all Canadians reaching the age of 70 appears assured. These pensioners will be a charge wholly on the Dominion, thus relieving the provinces of their present 25 per cent responsibility in respect of pensions granted on a basis of need. The provinces, though, will pay one-half the cost of pensions to those in the 65-69 age group who satisfy a means test. Only for this group will the means test be retained.

Working out a new pensions system in British Columbia is not going to be as simple as might appear at first glance. The chief complicating factor is that this province now adds a $10 bonus to the basic pension of $40. Since the cost of living today makes even a $50 pension little enough for the most meagre subsistence, any suggestion that the bonus should be withdrawn would be inhuman. On the other hand the base pension will go regardless of means to everyone who applies for it on reaching age 70, and the British Columbia taxpayer could scarcely be asked to put up a $10 bonus for those who do not need it.

Therefore it is likely that while the means test as qualification for the base pension will be abandoned, a modified form of examination will have to be adopted in this province. People satisfied with the $40 pension could draw it without question, but it seems only reasonable that those applying for the extra $10 should be asked to show a genuine need.

Circuses Belong Under the Big Top

PRACTICALLY all Canadians, one hopes, will endorse External Affairs Minister Pearson in deploring any possible loss of decorum and dignified procedure in the conduct of government affairs. Open diplomacy has replaced the secret methods of older days, but the pendulum must be kept from swinging to the opposite extreme.

Undoubtedly Mr. Pearson had in mind the three-ring circus atmosphere that too often envelops American legislative debate and Congressional committee hearings. These tribunals sometime seem as though staged by theatrical impresarios, what with television cameras, movie lights and all the adjuncts of a Broadway opening night. American ways are their own and for themselves to decide, but any suggestion of duplicating these performances on this side of the border would be deplored.

Canadians expect that public affairs should be legislated in an atmosphere free from extraneous interference; enough heat is generated by members themselves without the added excitements of appearing in the role of public entertainers. Apart altogether from the unwholesome situation such procedures create, the result is that legislators speak not to the business in hand but to the unseen gallery. They tend to become purely and simply personal propagandists.

A nation's business suffers immensely by this sort of publicity spree; certainly Canada's would, for there is respect here for orderly and calm process of both justice and parliamentary deliberation. To turn Canadian legislatures into the equivalent of bear gardens would be anathema to the people of this country. While there is no actual suggestion that the unrestrained habits of others should be followed, Mr. Pearson has dropped a reminder that was decidedly worth making.

ELEVEN-MAN BOARD

Sir,—With the appointment recently of a city manager and with members of the council scratching their heads and burning the midnight oil trying to find ways to keep down the mill rate, one would expect they would grasp at the opportunity of saving the salary of at least one alderman, thereby making a start at reducing the membership of the council.

If I can be shown why (aside possibly from some stupid technicality which should be scrapped) Victoria requires a larger council than the City of Vancouver, I'll eat my hat—and it's a none-too-clean, old, felt one, at that!

SPRING GARDEN FESTIVAL

Sir,—The picturesque photographs recently published in your newspaper showing some of the gardens included in our "Spring Garden Festival," were very much appreciated by the society. The press in Victoria has most willingly co-operated with our efforts to popularize our city.

We wish to publicly express the gratitude of the Society to all those owners of private gardens who opened their gates for the festival tours, and our thanks go to everybody else who helped to ensure the success of our festival.

Praise is due to the Provincial Government, who kindly illuminated the Legislative Buildings for the occasion.

We look forward to the day when our city authorities will join in our good work by lighting their many-colored street illuminations and by otherwise assisting this unique celebration of the "Spring Garden Festival"; which has for many years advertised far and wide that Victoria is the city of beautiful gardens.

FOR INVESTIGATION

Sir,—It is gratifying to read that the Mayor will seek a full probe and investigation to trace the money obtained by swindlers from local citizens.

Great credit is due to Mr. W. A. Scott, one of the swindlers' victims who, with great tenacity of purpose, has relentlessly brought pressure to have the whole matter brought out into the open.

Too many victims of swindlers take things lying down, but Mr. Scott has done just the opposite, and it is to be hoped that he will eventually recover part or the whole of his losses from wherever they have been cached, and that anyone who was a party to the swindles will be punished.

Two guilty parties are now serving sentences, but few swindlers do not have accomplices, and few thieves do not have fences.

Let's know who they are. . . . Let's know where the boodle is.

In Spring-Time

There's many a pool that holds a cloud
Deep down for miles, to float along;
There's many a hedge that's white with may,
To bring the backward birds to song;
There's many a country lane that smells
Of beanfields, through the night and day;
Then why should I be here this hour,
In Spring-time, when the month is May?

There's nothing else but stone I see,
With but this ribbon of a sky;
And not a garden big enough
To share it with a butterfly.
Why do I walk these dull dark streets,
In gloom and silence, all day long—
In Spring-time, when the blackbird's day
Is four and twenty hours of song?

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

REPORTING on a recent book, "Peace Can Be Won" (by Paul Hoffman), that well-known interlocutor of the "Information Please" radio program, Clifton Fadiman, begins by recalling the Continental Army lying around their campfires in the Winter of 1776.

You might wonder what 1776 had to do with the "cold" war of 1951, but such references to the beginnings of United States self-contained history is standard practice among American commentators and reviewers. Every so often Walter Winchell, for instance, drags in Valley Forge or George Washington in order to point some moral or titillate the ego of his fellow countrymen.

A violent revolution is of course an event not easily forgotten by the nation that emerges from it. Frenchmen make a feast of Bastille Day even though they might shrink from its modern repetition. Russians recall a day in October with a gusto not indicative of any shrinkage.

No such red-letter day marks Canadian history, since national sovereignty came to this country by the peaceful route of evolution. There is consequently no one event to harp on, which may account for the innate conservatism that astonishes our friends across the line.

* * *

Over there, as every Canadian knows, no public speech is worth its salt unless it is liberally sprinkled with the word "American", whether this be in praise of their way of life or the people who live that way and are inclined to think it the best of all ways. There is, however, a continual need for this emphasis, albeit so often it seems overdone or altogether superfluous. Seventeen seventy-six is so long ago you might think that what it connotes could well be taken for granted now, but a polyglot nation needs constantly to be indoctrinated with Americanism in order to be American.

This is one of the secrets of American strength, nevertheless. Its manners cannot be judged by ours, distasteful though some of them may be to our way of thinking. Newcomers to the United States are never allowed to forget their new nationality, but such reiteration breeds the pride of country that is so marked a quality in Americans, native or adopted.

National pride, held in respectable bonds, is not merely commendable; it is essential to any nation that aspires to greatness or has greatness thrust upon it. No individual is of real worth unless he has self pride, and the same goes for individuals when grouped together in mass as a nation.

* * *

There are times, perhaps, when American national pride seems unduly smug, as for instance Mr. Fadiman's feeling about "Peace Can Be Won" that "we Americans have been selected, whether by accident or Divine Providence, to help draw the world's peoples from the shades of the prison-house of the police state." Yet facts are facts and no one can deny that upon America in this connection has fallen a responsibility so vast as sometimes to be frightening.

If the United States were merely the country of braggadocio, gangsters and corrupt politicians and nothing else, as might easily be assumed from the publicity given to these elements of American life, then the world's peoples quoted by Mr. Fadiman would have sound cause to shudder, but America is far from that. Its virtues may be deep but they are solid and enduring, and the surest proof of their existence is that were they not in reality the important characteristics of American life, America would have come apart at the seams long before this.

American greatness, both sought and accidental, is after all a comparatively new thing, so that the Fadimans and the Winchells feel impelled to keep it in sight. With maturity will come soberness, however, which is just as well, for even without reading "Peace Can Be Won" it is obvious that peace cannot be won without America playing a dominant role one way or another.

Jottings From Britain

By H. J. J. SARGINT
North American Newspaper Alliance

LONDON.—The United States is not accepting any payment from the Austrian Government for the maintenance of the American occupation troops in Austria. The United States is the only country of the four occupation powers which has made this gesture.

This information was given in reply to a question put to the Austrian Foreign Minister, Carl Gruber, when he paid a flying visit to London. Gruber, who has been establishing contact with the new British Foreign Secretary, Herbert Morrison, said that perhaps Britain might also waive the occupation costs of her troops in Austria, but there was no sign as yet that this would happen.

Gruber added that there were approximately 50,000 Russian troops and 30,000 Western Zone troops in Austria. Officially, the Austrians are not supposed to know how many foreign troops were actually in occupation of Austria but, roughly speaking, the troops of the United States, Great Britain and France amounted to about 10,000 to each country.

Austria, he added, was not planning to participate in Western rearmament. She only aimed at political stability which, in the minister's opinion, was a precondition for political stability throughout Europe. He looked forward to a new Europe which would be federated and would have a common political system.

Hundreds of English folk still claim descent from William the Conqueror and those who fought with him at the Battle of Hastings in 1066.

A great festival is being organized at Caen in Normandy to commemorate the event next August and Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret have been invited to attend. Whether they will have time to do so remains to be seen.

Princess Elizabeth, back from her Italian holiday, has plunged straight into a run of public engagements. She attended the solemn rededication service of a famous old church in South London, St. John the Evangelist, which was bombed to pieces in December, 1940.

The London section of the Festival of Britain lies within the parish of St. John's. The princess then flew to Chester to attend the passing-out parade at an officer cadet school there and later she went to Twickenham, outside London, to watch a rugby match.

Princess Margaret is planning to have a great Summer this year and from now until her 21st birthday in August she will go from party to party with a little band of chosen friends. Ascot Week in the middle of June will see Princess Margaret with the rest of the Royal Family at Windsor Castle, whence the King and Queen and their daughters will drive every day in semi-state up the race course to the grandstand at Ascot.

Among Margaret's friends at the castle for the week will be Lady Rosemary Spencer Churchill, a daughter of the Duke of Marlborough and sister of the Marquis of Blandford, one of Margaret's most faithful escorts.

The privacy of bank accounts is going to be swept away for the first time in Britain by new powers which the current finance bill is giving the Chancellor of the Exchequer this year.

The bill provides that bank managers will have to give tax inspectors, if required, the names and addresses of all customers getting more than £15 a year interest on deposit accounts. The Post Office Savings Bank will also have to supply tax officials with details of interest payments to larger depositors.

The £15 minimum means that any depositor with more than £3,000 will have his name revealed to the Inland Revenue if necessary. Bank deposits draw interest at ½ of 1 per cent. The Post Office Savings Bank pays 2½ per cent interest on its deposits which now amount to £2,000,000,000, so that anyone with more than £600 there is likely to be brought in. These drastic regulations, which are intended to stop tax dodging, have shocked city bankers, but they will go through all the same.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

WHEN a suburban area that has been, to all intents and purposes, a village in its own right, becomes merged at last into the expanding city, it takes the community some little time to get used to city ways and to forget its village characteristics. This is particularly true with regard to suburban behavior in the motor car.

In a village, everybody knows everybody else. It is all very chummy. The suburban village shopping district has a personal quality as between merchant and customer that is pretty close to domestic in spirit. They call the cop Joe or Bill.

In a village, you park your car the handiest way, whatever that happens to be: angle parked, parallel, double, triple. Or if you like, park bang in the middle for a minute, while you pop in to grab a loaf of bread, wave it at Harry, yoo-hoo, and tell him to put it on the bill.

Driving the car within the village limits is much the same. This horse and buggy-like handling of a car in a village, is the nearest thing the motor car and the horse and buggy ever come in their character. You stop to holler, or greet a friend, or even stop where you are and turn off the engine while some neighbor stands, foot on the running board, to converse at leisure with you. If you are in anybody's way, well, for Pete's sake, all they have got to do is toot.

Such villages around cities some day become suburbs. And then comes the day, imperceptibly almost, when the city grows out and out, and engulfs it.

But the village dies last of all in the one particular of its motor car habits. A newly incorporated suburb is always a baffling place to a stranger, driving. It seems lawless.

Soon enough, however, the city will prevail over it. All will be strangers to one another, in due time.

The Law's Debt to France

(Sidney S. Alderman in the Canadian Bar Review)

TWO of the greatest historians of the English law, Pollock and Maitland, call the Norman Conquest "a catastrophe which determined the whole future history of English law." Speaking of the effect of the Conquest on our legal language, they say: "One indelible mark it has stamped forever on the whole body of our law. It would hardly be too much to say that at the present day almost all our words that have a definite legal import are in a certain sense French words."

They point out that a few English terms, such as earl, sheriff, king, queen, lords, knights of the shire, were preserved. Aldermen are English, but mayors are French.

True a man may still give, sell, buy, let, hire, borrow, bequeath, make a deed, a will, a bond, and even commit manslaughter or murder in English. But contract, agreement, covenant, obligation, debt, condition, bill, note, master, servant, partner, guarantee, tort, trespass, assault, battery, slander, damage, crime, treason, felony, misdemeanour, arson, robbery, burglary, larceny, property, possession, pledge, lien, payment, money, grant, purchase, devise, descent, heir, easement, marriage, guardian, infant, ward, all are French.

When we enter a court of justice: courts, justices, judges, jurors, counsel, attorneys, clerks, parties, plaintiff, defendant, action, suit, claim, demand, indictment, count, declaration, pleadings, evidence, verdict, conviction, judgment, sentence, appeal, reprieve, pardon, execution, every one and every thing, save the witnesses, writs and oaths, have French names.

From Files of The Daily British Colonist for May, 1861

By G. E. MORTIMORE

BUSINESS was booming in Nanaimo. Reports carried by The Daily British Colonist predicted a shining future for the Hub City (which had not yet given itself that nickname).

"The demand for coal steadily continues to increase, and the company only need such an incentive to be enabled to still further extend their mining operations.

"In a commercial point of view, Nanaimo is destined ere long to attain some pre-eminence; all that is required to establish the foundation of a prosperous and wealthy town is the security of a market for our famous coal.

"The mineral wealth of the district entire is known to be very great, and the location of the town and excellent harbor are such as will command success and ensure future prosperity, if the call for coal only warranted the development of our rich mineral resources; of this there can be but little doubt.

"The . . . restrictions with which this place was so long embarrassed are now removed. Sir James Douglas, who could no longer remain . . . deaf to the numerous petitions from the people, was pleased to issue a proclamation declaring Nanaimo a port of entry, just before the expiry of his official career . . ."

(Douglas had been replaced by Governor Arthur E. Kennedy).

"This move will, in no small degree, enhance the prospects of the town. Already a trade has been opened up between this place and New Westminster, the schooner Alpha having made her second trip, bringing here valuable cargoes.

"Buildings are going up in every direction, and soon we hope to see the old log houses, yet standing, supplanted by others of better construction, and a little different design. There is here an inexhaustable supply of . . . excellent building stone, easy of access.

"There are now established here six general trading stores, all of which appear to be doing a good fair business; two hotels, two bakeries, and one butcher's shop seem to be doing well. Messrs. Gordon and Blessing, builders, have their hands pretty full.

"The place . . . since being surveyed, and laid out in town lots, looks more businesslike, and is fast assuming the pretensions and attractions of older and more populous communities."

While Nanaimo and its big sister Victoria were growing, the site of the future city of Vancouver was still wild forest.

DEFENCE

With Congress beginning to lower the boom on nonessential executive agencies, Washington bureaucrats have been giving a wry joke considerable circulation. Said one official to another:

"This defence work is getting me down."

"But your agency hasn't anything to do with defence"

"Doesn't it? Why we spend all our time now upon the Hill—defending ourselves!"

Last Horse Says Good-Bye

—Colonist Photo by Jim Ryan.

Victoria's last milk route horse, famous 14-year-old Punch, is now somewhere on West Coast of the Island on way to green pastures after being retired May 1. If a horse has that kind of a memory, Punch is remembering nine years of service on city's milk routes, mostly in the Fairfield district and perhaps recalling days when district youngsters ran out to give him sugar and apples. Punch was put in shipping box by veteran barnman Ed Low. Departure of the "last horse" meant end of career to Low. He now must face "mechanical" future in which beloved horses have no part.

Airborne Leaflets Miss City's Centre

Victorians' heads craned skywards yesterday afternoon as aircraft scattered thousands of leaflets over the downtown area.

They were dropped as a publicity stunt in connection with next week's fifth annual B.C. Products Fair of the Junior [illegible] at the Memorial Arena afternoons and evenings.

Unfortunately, however, a brisk breeze carried most of the leaflets far to the south of the city's heart.

Youngsters attempting to collect the greatest number of leaflets, for which special prizes are to be given, had a difficult time. There was no actual concentration of the papers at any one area. Some of the leaflets entitled holders to free passes to the fair.

NEAR MISS

In his eagerness to gather the papers, one lad almost paid with his life. Zig-zagging along a sidewalk and curb line to follow a drifting leaflet, he suddenly rushed onto the street and into the path of an oncoming car. Hasty braking by the driver narrowly averted a serious accident.

Release of the leaflets from the plane coincided with the start of a B.C. Products Fair parade through downtown area. Hundreds of shoppers lined the streets to watch the marching units, bands and hear a sound truck give details of the fair.

Steel Union Plans New Wage Talks

TORONTO, May 5 (CP).—A new round of wage demands in the Canadian steel industry appeared imminent tonight following a meeting of the national policy committee of the United Steelworkers of America (C.C.L.).

The committee represents some 60,000 workers from British Columbia to Newfoundland.

The committee said the union could no longer accept cost-of-living escalator systems as satisfactory substitutes for the usual wage increases.

Few Listeners Object to Calls From Radio Survey Operator

THIS WEEK'S RADIO

By RAY BAINES

"This is the Penn McLeod radio survey calling," a cheerful voice said over the phone the other morning. "Are you listening to your radio? What station? What program?"

We told the owner of the cheerful voice what he wanted to know.

"Now," we said, "we write a radio column, so how about you answering a few questions."

Oddly enough, the owner of the voice turned out to be an old friend, Alan Pratt, who for one week a month makes 80 phone calls an hour.

RATE PROGRAMS

The Penn McLeod and Elliott-Haynes surveys are designed to supply information to radio stations on which they measure the popularity of programs.

Confined to a wheel-chair, Alan Pratt is the kind of guy whose friendly personality is most suited to this kind of work.

Alan says that about 99 per cent of the people called are reasonably co-operative and the other small minority are inclined to get "a bit hostile."

"It's most interesting work," he says, "especially if you like people."

DUBIOUS

Some persons called are a little dubious at first. They think the call is from (a) friends pulling a gag (b) a radio quiz show or (c) someone selling something.

The contrasts are amazing, Allan says. One day a woman said she was not listening to the radio, she was sitting reading her Bible. The next person called was an inebriated gentleman who invited Alan to come up and "help him kill his bottle."

Another woman launched into a heated attack on all commercial radio broadcasting and said she listened to nothing but C.B.C. network shows.

HELPS LISTENERS

Although the survey is sometimes considered a "nuisance," Alan explained that more people are realizing that it is for their collective good.

The majority will get what they want to hear. But like all commercial entertainment, radio discriminates, in a sense, against the minority who prefer Johann Bach to Jack Benny.

Alan says the system is similar to the "Hooper ratings" often referred to in American radio broadcasting. A representative cross-section of the radio public is queried and the results are compiled and sold by the company to interested radio stations and networks.

ONE A MONTH

Although the Penn McLeod and Elliott-Haynes firms are rivals in the survey business, things are arranged so that no one is called more than once a month.

"If you get more than one call a month," Alan says, "you can bet that someone's pulling your leg or some unauthorized person is trying to get into the act."

Night workers who sleep during the day can avoid being called if they will phone Alan at G 6797 and tell him to pass them up.

FOUR-HOUR SHIFTS

The survey normally operates between 8 a.m. and 10:15 p.m. during one week of the month. The workers operate on four-hour shifts, during which they make about 320 calls.

This had to come finally.

"What program are you listening to and what type do you like best?" we asked.

"Well," Alan confided, "I must admit that my own tastes don't always coincide with those of the people I call. In fact, sometimes I wish they would say what I would say if someone called me."

FOR GARDENERS

Even Victorians, with their reputation as top-rate gardeners, might benefit from the C.B.C. Trans-Canada gardening series beginning today at 10 a.m.

The unnamed "B.C. Gardener" will do a weekly program on every phase of gardening from storing bulbs to caring for house plants.

The series will run through until July 29 of this year.

Some 4,500,000 Austrians in the four occupied zones, including the Soviet zone, will get their first chance in history to vote for a new president today.

All previous Austrian presidents have been chosen by Parliament.

The six candidates, including a woman school teacher, finished their campaigns in VIENNA last night. The vote will be regarded as a measure of Communist strength in the country.

In the last Austrian elections, held in 1949, Communists ran a poor fourth. Because laws require winning candidate to poll more than 50 per cent of popular vote, observers feel no candidate will win a clear victory and a run-off election will follow.

On past performance, such a run-off would probably pit the conservative People's Party against Socialists.

Gramophone-Hating Printer Peppered Hotel With Shotgun

to its present size. The old "harness shop" building to the north was taken over. The Macgregor Block, built in 1900, on the site of an old livery stable, was taken over in 1930.

NEWSROOM SHIFTS

The editorial rooms were moved there from the crowded quarters they had occupied next door to the linotype machines in the composing room one floor up.

When The Colonist first moved to Broad Street, the composing room had three of those newfangled machines called linotypes. They and the rest of the machinery in the plant were run by steam.

The boiler which raised steam to run the printing machinery still serves to heat the building.

An auxiliary gas engine was also used to run the linotypes, and gas was used to heat the type-metal pots. Gas pressure used to run low at midnight, and there often were frantic calls to the gasworks.

OLD LAMPS SURVIVE

Three of the old gas lamps from those days still survive in the building which The Colonist leaves today. One is in the composing room, one in the stereotype room, one in the pressroom. All were used in emergencies until a few months ago. Their pilot light burned continuously for more than 50 years.

"My first job here was rushing the growler," Mr. Chislett said. He explained that the term meant fetching beer for the hard-working printers.

"They had a can for beer, and every time it ran dry they sent me down to the old Manhattan Saloon at the corner of Broad and Yates for a bucket of beer. It cost ten cents."

LONG SERVICE

Next in the running to Mr. Chislett in years of service are J. R. Hibberson, advertising foreman, here since 1907; A. W. [illegible] night make-up man, since 1912; Dave Fairfull, 1917; Bert Pottinger, night foreman, here since 1923; and Dave Clarke, day foreman, since 1922.

Among them all they can tell some yarns. Many printers were hard drinkers then, and there would be a bottle beside every other linotype.

The old-timers remember, among the multitudes who passed through the shop Carrie Haudenshield, the lady compositor.

"REAL LADY"

"She was a real lady among a bunch of men," one old-timer said. "She always insisted on paying her way. You could take her out, but if you didn't let her pay she wouldn't let you take her out again."

A big, wild printer called Jack Henley used to bring Carrie flowers which he gathered in the woods on hunting expeditions. Henley was a character in his own right. He had a habit of bringing a shotgun to the shop on Saturday nights. Sometimes when a gramophone blared too loud from the nearby King Edward Hotel, he let fly at it with both barrels.

FLAT-BED PRESS

The press used to be of the old flat-bed kind, which printed directly from type. Pages, which were the product of several hours' work, were lowered from composing room to press by an old hand winch.

One day the whole four pages of the magazine section were being lowered when something caught and everything spilled down two stories. There was no magazine that week.

Another time there was a more [illegible] Page Two were just being taken out of the shaft when someone put his knee right through the middle of the front page.

BOX FULL OF PI

The press was due to run in a few minutes, and there was no time to re-set the damaged portion. So it was carved out. The front page that morning carried an enormous blank "box" with no words in it but "Pi," set in large type.

Once Fred McNeil (no relation to The Colonist's present city editor) walked from the stereotype room into the elevator which he thought was there. Someone had taken it away in the meanwhile. Fred grabbed the cables as he fell, and skinned his hands as he slid down two stories.

Those are among the minor annals of the composing room. The reporters and editors have their stories to tell, too. But it is a strange fact that the men who spend their lives focusing the spotlight on others like to keep clear of it themselves.

TURNOVER

The Colonist has changed its entire editorial staff except for two men in the 20 years since the news room shifted down to the Macgregor Block.

The great depression was stifling business at the time of the move. Newspapers and every other business operated on cut budgets.

The veteran newsmen remember how The Colonist struggled through the depression years to the slightly better times of the late 30's, and then to the nervous times of appeasement and crisis.

In the days before the declara- [illegible] tained a 24-hour watch from Thursday to Monday.

WARTIME TROUBLES

Those who were here can tell how difficult it was to operate a newspaper under censorship, military directives and staff shortages, but newspaper troubles were lost in the larger griefs which enveloped the world.

Elections in older days, as now, set the newspaper office in a turmoil. But in pre-radio days everyone had to work much harder and under tougher conditions. Even after radio was well established, its coverage was not so fast or complete, and the big task of gathering and reporting returns fell to newspapers.

CROWD HELD BACK

Editorial offices had to be roped off to keep the place from being mobbed. Results were announced on elaborate bulletin boards and over the loud-speaker which still stands above the front door of The Colonist's old business office. That loud speaker was last used to announce King Edward's abdication.

Through elaborate organization and a push-button signal, The Colonist got a paper on the street announcing the end of the Japanese war 37 seconds after official word came from Washington.

BEAT MAYOR

As newsboys cried The Colonist war-end extra around the streets, the mayor was still waiting with his finger poised above a button which would sound sirens to announce the war's end.

Recent Colonist graduates include the fabulous John MacLean, the photographer-reporter [illegible] drafted to sell papers.

Among the newspapermen who have served The Colonist well were Charles Lugrin and Charles Swayne, successive editors-in-chief.

OTHER WORKERS

Other names at random from the last few decades are the late R. L. Pocock, who worked in his time as photographer, sports editor, city editor and telegraph editor; Frank Kelley, veteran marine editor who still writes for this paper from semi-retirement; and the late T. Harry Wilson, a good newspaperman with a phenomenal memory.

Recent Colonist graduates include the fabulous John MacLean, the photographer-reporter who went from here to the Toronto Telegram and won the Toronto Men's Press Club 1950 award for the best feature picture of the year.

And there are a legion of other names, big and small. Like nearly all of those who write for the day which is passing over their heads, they are remembered today and forgotten tomorrow.

R.C.A.F. Reserve Unit in Victoria Set to Recruit 53 Women at Once

MILITARY ACTIVITIES

By TREVOR COLLINS

The R.C.A.F. is now ready to register women, Sqdn. Ldr. P. D. P. Holmes said yesterday.

No. 2445 Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron (Reserve) will seek 53 women immediately, the commanding officer said.

Former W.D. radar technicians and fighter control operators are urgently neded, or any women over the age of 18 and single who feel they would like to join the reserve Air Force are requested to report at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the air force recruiting office on Government Street.

Miss E. L. Schildemeyer, who served in London with the air force for two years during the World War has been chosen to organize the womens' division of the unit.

She will be available, with officers of the unit, to interview anyone who wishes to register, between 10 a.m. and noon Sunday.

"We already have about 40 applications from women to join the squadron," Sqdn. Ldr. Holmes said.

PUBLIC RELATIONS

At least one unit at the armoury has decided to organize a public relations department—and make it work.

Capt. Charles McLeod of the 5th B.C. Coast Regiment, will head the department. Assisting him will be Robert Thompson, radio announcer and script writer; and Kenneth Davidson, artist and cartoonist.

Davidson made his debut in this column last Thursday when he discovered a seldom-used swimming pool in the armoury basement. Today he joins most Reserve Army soldiers in believing women will be a welcome addition to the armoury.

Latest idea calls for a public relations office in the armoury to handle news from all units.

At least one officer thinks the Canadian Army should hire a public relations man to handle the job.

"Maybe they could spare a man that could do the work from the Army's public relations headquarters at Edmonton," he said.

Parades this week:

CAN. SCOTTISH REGIMENT

Monday—19:40 hours: Parade at the Armory, training as per syllabus.

Thursday — 19:40 hours: Parade at the Armory. Rifle Association meeting will be held at 20:00 hours in the men's mess.

Surprise Move Gives Glaziers Pay Increases

Victoria's glaziers and glass-workers have gained pay increases ranging from 14 to 18 cents an hour.

Don Bushell, business agent for Local 1163, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America (A.F.L.-T.L.C.), which represents 25 glassworkers employed by the city's three glass firms, made the announcement yesterday.

Members of the union voted to accept a joint proposal by union and company representatives.

The surprise agreement short-circuited a conciliation board which had just been appointed, with H. F. Higgins of Vancouver as chairman.

Journeymen get an increase of 18 cents an hour; glassworkers 15½; unskilled and semi-skilled glassworkers, 14 cents. This brings their hourly pay up to $1.32, $1.25 and $1.13, respectively.

Retroactive from January 1 to April 30, the workers get half the increase, and from May 1 onward, the full rate. The agreement runs until March 1, 1952. Maintenance-of-membership clause is unchanged.

The three firms involved are Pacific Glass Co., Hobbs Glass Co. and O'Neil's Glass & Paint Co.

The Schreckhorn, or "Peak of Terror" in the Swiss Alps, height 13,386 feet, was first climbed by Sir Leslie Stephen in 1861.

HOPE... SHOWMEN

The ... groups we paid par... tention to was the Four ... finance ... through ... a unit that played a ... lure ... azz, some Latin-American ... and several standards, all ... sically excellent, tastily arranged and very danceable.

Under the leadership of accordionist Al Jensen, the Four Showmen include pianist George Foxcroft, bassist Ron Welch and guitarist Ron Paige. Added decoration, and a pleasant one at that, was vocalist Marge Burgess, making her initial bow to the music world and doing a good job of rounding out the group.

NO 'BOP'

Al and his unit make no effort to enter the field of 'bop or the progressive school of music and, for that, we can say a word of thanks.

But what they can do, and well, is play the kind of music that sounds good if you're sitting and is even better when you get up to dance. What vocal numbers there are sound intelligent and understandable.

We have yet to figure out just what the vocal numbers one of the other small groups offered really meant.

CONTINENTALS

We mean the Continentals—they went to work for a half-hour, started off very well with their theme song, "The Continental," and then unleashed some of the wildest gibberish these old ears have yet managed to dodge.

Abetted by a solid core of about 20 followers, the Continentals played a number of unpronounceable tunes in the guise of 'bop.

NOISY

The noise increased in volume and the tunes became more and more confusing until even the group's most ardent fans would have been hard put to translate the meaning of it all.

They were living proof of a statement made to us by one of America's top musicians, a pioneer in the field of 'bop and still rated high on the list of 'bopsters:

"Good 'bop (progressive jazz) is a definite part of the music of America. The only thing that will kill it is the flock of bad imitators that are starting to crowd the field."

EASIER

After a half-hour of 'bop,-even old-time music sounded fresh and interesting and certainly easier to understand.

The Continentals are a basically sound musical unit and, certainly, Wally Grieve is one of the finest drummers to come out of Victoria, but if this trio could contain themselves long enough to get back to playing the type of music that put them ahead in the first place, the air would be clearer and the notes sweeter.

The boys are starting a sustaining program over CKDA today at 3:05 to 3:30 p.m. weekly during the Summer, so perhaps their switch to Sunday afternoons will cause them to become more conservative in their tastes.

Other thoughts for the week include the announcement by the Victoria Symphony Society of the program for the 11th symphony season starting next Fall.

Guest artists include George Haddad, Canada's foremost pianist; Grant Jonannesen, outstanding Swedish-American pianist; soprano Lois Marshall, acknowledged the greatest singer Canada has produced; 'cellist Mary Hammond and violinist Clifford Evens, both outstanding members of the local symphony, aided by pianist Charles Palmer; Denise Mara, pianist and star pupil of Jan Cherniavski, and, finally, the Victoria Choral Society, under the direction of Graham Steed, will present Mendelssohn's greatest oratorio, "Elijah."

Lion Found In Parked Car

SAN FRANCISCO, May 5 (INS).—A 200-pound mountain lion was found today chained in an automobile parked on a San Francisco street.

The car was promptly towed to a police garage—with the lion still in it.

"And that's where he's going to stay—in the car—until we find the owner," said towman Joe Giovannini.

Junior Chamber of Commerce Members Organize Fair

For first time, young Victoria businessmen will completely handle details of fifth annual B.C. Products Fair to be held in Memorial Arena Tuesday through Saturday. Pictured above are members who organized the fair: Seated, left to right, V. Fuggle, V. Butler, D. Anderson (chairman), S. Brett (co-ordinator), A. Evans. New Industries for City Aim of Fair

Proceeds Will Be Used To Attract More Firms

New industries for Victoria may prove one of the most important products of the fifth annual B.C. Products Fair, opening in the Memorial Arena on Tuesday.

Donald E. C. Anderson, chairman of the Junior Chamber of Commerce committee sponsoring the fair, said that proceeds of the fair would be used to publish and distribute a brochure designed to attract new industries to Victoria.

HOPE FOR CAMPAIGN

The committee also hopes to finance an advertising campaign throughout North America to lure new industry to Victoria on the proceeds of the fair.

"Our Government is doing everything possible at the level of policy and law to harness the industrial potential and to encourage and assist our present British Columbia industries," Mr. Anderson said recently in an open letter to Victorians.

"But more than law and policy are required to achieve these objectives," he said.

"Industrial development can best be set in motion, maintained and expanded by private enterprise, by buyers and sellers meeting in the marketplace and formulating private transactions which are mutually profitable, and by the consuming public being granted the opportunity to see and examine our British Columbia products."

He said the B.C. Products Fair is designed to give British Columbia manufacturers a chance to meet their public and display their products.

Turning to the campaign to attract new industry, he said, "We can't wait for outsiders to come in and establish themselves.

"We must sell the industrial advantages of our own areas to prospective new industries; we must publicize the economic advantages such as climate, labor supply, markets and power which we have to offer.

"We are pleased to be able to assist this vital plan by applying the proceeds of our fair towards the publication and distribution of an industrial brochure and towards commercial advertising throughout North America in an effort to attract new industries to British Columbia and more particularly to Vancouver Island.

"So with hats off to the past and coats off to the future, we of the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce invite you all to attend our fifth annual 1951 B.C. Products Fair."

Oak Bay Cleric For Mainland Post

Rev. Angus Cameron, assistant priest at St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay, for the past two years, will leave Victoria May 14 to take over the duties of rector of the parish of St. Faith, Vancouver.

A sub-chaplain of the Order of St. John, Mr. Cameron has taken an active part in the local St. John Ambulance branch.

He has also served as president of the Victoria Anglican Sunday School Teachers' Association, chaplain to the Victoria Council of the A.Y.P.A. and secretary of the Diocesan Board of Religious Education.

Starts Tuesday in Memorial Arena

Plan Many Feature Attractions At Annual B.C. Products Fair

The fifth annual B.C. Products Fair will start a five-day run in the Memorial Arena Tuesday.

Industry will team up with showmanship every day between 2 and 11 p.m. to interest and entertain Victorians while promoting the sale of the products of British Columbia industry.

The Victoria Junior of Commerce, in sponsoring the fair, offers Victoria charities a chance to swell their coffers by ticket sales. They also hope to raise enough money to finance a promotion campaign to attract new industry to Victoria.

SET QUEEN CONTEST

The fair will exhibit industrial, agricultural and commercial products which are manufactured in British Columbia. Feature attractions will include a queen contest, a children's day, a grand parade, a fashion show, an amateur talent contest, daily door prizes and a grand prize.

The display of British Columbia's products is designed to familiarize Victoria with the diversity and quality of the manufacturing output of the province.

Victorians will be urged to follow the slogan of the fair: "Buy British Columbia products, build British Columbia payrolls."

ANNOUNCE ADMISSIONS

Single admission to the fair will be 25 cents. Weekly passes will be on sale for $1. The passes will allow the purchaser or any member of his immediate family to attend the fair at any time.

Both single ticket and pass holders will be eligible for door prizes for each visit to the fair.

Fifteen door prizes will be drawn every night. Grand door prize to be drawn Saturday night will be a new automobile.

Exhibits will reflect the growing versatility and diversity of British Columbia industry.

MANY DISPLAYS

There will be displays of industrial operations, household utensils, home furnishings, electrical equipment, paint, building supplies, dairy products, gardening supplies, foodstuffs, fuels, soft drinks, drugs, jewelry and many other products.

The fair was preceded by a grand parade yesterday.

Tomorrow night it will be officially launched at an Empress Hotel dinner to be attended by exhibitors, Cabinet ministers, civic officials and businessmen.

The gathering will be addressed by E. A. Clark, Vancouver representative of the Aluminum Company of Canada.

OPENS AT 2 P.M.

The fair will be thrown open to the public at 2 p.m. Tuesday. It will be open from 2 to 11 p.m. until Saturday night.

A special children's day program will highlight the fair on Thursday.

All Victoria and district schools have been asked to encourage their students to attend the fair in organized groups under guidance of teachers. This will mean a holiday from classes for the students.

Special prizes, buttons and a quiz program will be scheduled for that day.

VOTE FOR QUEEN

Throughout the fair, Victorians will have a chance to vote for the girl they want to be crowned queen of the fair.

Every night at 9, girls from the Provincial Employees' Association, Victoria College, Pro-Rec, B.C. Telephone Company, B.C. Electric Company, B.C. Forest Products, Esquimalt Community Centre and the Victoria Girls' Drill Team will appear.

The queen will be chosen by ballots of all who attend the fair throughout the week. She will be crowned 10 p.m. Saturday.

Another feature of the fair will be a fashion show in which all types of women's clothing manufactured in British Columbia will be on display.

AMATEUR SHOW

Every night at 8 four amateur artists, selected from 16 chosen during a CJVI amateur talent series, will appear at the fair.

A winner will be named each night. Saturday night the four nightly winners will compete for a grand talent championship. The talent contests will be broadcast over radio station CJVI.

Passes for the fair are available throughout the city at stores displaying a B.C. Products Fair poster.

They are also on sale by any member of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, Solarium Auxiliary, Junior Auxiliary to the B.C. Protestant Orphanage, or junior board of the Victorian Order of Nurses.

WITCH DOCTOR'S CACHE

LOUIS TRICHARDT, South Africa (CP)—The daughter of a witch doctor was the successful claimant to a pot of sovereigns minted in the late 1800's. The woman claimed her father buried the gold outside his hut before he died in 1926. A European now farms the area where the hoard was discovered.

Organ Recital Daily Feature

Organ music from the magic fingers of Victoria organist Reginald Stone will provide a musical note to the B.C. Products Fair.

Between 3:30 and 4 p.m. each day of the fair, Mr. Stone will conduct a special organ recital, featuring a mixture of modern selections and songs of long ago.

Tied in with the organist's program there will be a musical quizz, based primarily on song titles.

Solarium Junior League Members to Be Models

Fashion Show Serate Event

Of special interest to women of Greater Victoria will be the fashion show to be held in conjunction with the B.C. Products Fair.

Stanley Britt, fair co-ordinator, reports the fashion show will be a separate phase this year, and that many surprises are in store.

Only clothing made in British Columbia will be exhibited. The job will be handled by ten members of the Queen Alexandra Solarium Junior League, who have been chosen to serve as models.

Another Junior League member, Mrs. Howard Damaske, will be commentator.

Dresses, coats, sunsuits and a host of other items of women's apparel will be featured in the half-hour, nightly fashion show.

"They're the same," the technician said, "fired from the same gun. Take a look."

Dr. Dixon studied the two bullets carefully. "That does it," he said. "We've had to stretch our jurisdiction to get the evidence, but this is it. They were both fired from the same gun."

"Where does that leave us?" the technician asked.

"That leaves us with three bullets and two empty cartridge cases," Dr. Dixon said.

"Then we're short one cartridge case."

"On the contrary," Dr. Dixon said, "we're long one bullet."

* * *

The preliminary hearing of Robert Trenton for the murder of Harvey Richmond was very much of a cut-and-dried procedure, so far as the People's case was concerned.

Having proven the identity of the charred corpse, Norton Berkeley, the prosecutor, called Dr. Nathan Beaumont to the stand.

Dr. Beaumont, crisply professional, testified that X-ray photographs had disclosed the presence of two bullets. He had, therefore, carefully probed for and located the bullets. In the doctor's opinion, either bullet would have been instantly fatal.

The doctor testified that he had marked these bullets so he could identify them, and had delivered them to the coroner. The two bullets, which he now produced to be introduced in evidence, were the same bullets he had taken from the charred body. He would give it as his opinion that death was produced by gunshot wounds.

Staunton Irvine, the attorney representing Rob Trenton, having studied the list of questions which Dr. Dixon had told Trenton to deliver to him, launched a half-hearted cross-examination.

"Had the investigation stopped when the bullets were found?"

Dr. Beaumont fixed the attorney with a scornful eye and said patronizingly, "I was employed to find the cause of death. Having found that for which I was searching, I ceased searching—which is a natural thing to do."

"You're certain that these bullets were the cause of death?"

"As certain as I am that I'm sitting here."

"That's all," Irvine said.

The doctor was excused. The next witness was a ballistic expert who introduced the .32 automatic into evidence. He identified the two bullets as having been fired from that particular .32 automatic.

"Call Merton Ostrander," the district attorney said. "Come forward and be sworn."

"I prefer not to."

"Your preferences have nothing whatever to do with it," the judge said.

Ostrander hesitated, then, with quite obvious reluctance, walked down the aisle.

"Now then," District Attorney Berkeley said in a loud, dramatic voice, "I have here, Your Honor, a hostile witness . . ."

"Go ahead," the judge said. "I will be able to see the attitude of the witness without having someone point it out to me."

The district attorney said, "Mr. Ostrander, I'll call your attention to the night of the 20th. Did you see the defendant on that night? . . . Yes . . . Have you ever seen this .32 automatic before?"

"I . . . I believe I have . . . Yes . . . I saw it on the morning of the 21st . . . Around 2 o'clock in the morning."

"And who had that weapon?"

Lazy Wall Street Sags Without Showing Trend

By The Associated Press

Stocks tipped lower yesterday in a quiet market.

Most of the session on Wall Street witnessed a mixture of gains and losses that added up to [illegible] before the [illegible] closed.

Losses but a floor of around $1.75, while gains punched upward to a ceiling of about $1.25.

Trading was only moderately active with an estimated [illegible] shares changing hands. A week ago the total came to 750,000 shares.

MONTREAL MIXED

Securities were narrowly irregular on the Montreal Stock Exchange and Curb Market. Trading was moderately active.

In the Industrial list small fractional adjustments were made in both directions.

Gains held a narrow edge over losses in the papers while senior oils were unchanged to a trifle easier. Western senior metals, banks, beverages and consumer lists were unchanged to mixed. Steels, coppers and textiles were steady to firmer.

Among gainers were Howard Smith Paper, Brown Bell Canada, Bank of Commerce, Canadian Celanese, Dominion Tar Foundations Company, Walker and Massey-Harris.

Mines followed the trend of the industrial market and changes were mostly pennies with no significant features.

Calvan brightened a narrow Western oil picture when it [illegible] 40 cents in active trading for a new high of $5.55.

TORONTO STEPS

[illegible] little lower. The tendency to trade was not pronounced enough to call it a definite trend. Volume for the short two-hour session was about 1,000,000 shares.

In Industrials paper stocks, textiles, utilities and mining showed a majority of losses. Heads, coal issues and miscellaneous factors [illegible] were higher and banks and utilities were about evenly balanced. Dominion Textile, [illegible] the most active stocks and [illegible] more than $2 on a turn.

Base metals were mixed with price changes mostly ten cents or less.

Western oils were fairly active but price signs were the most interesting.

Golds showed little change or activity.

GRAINS DECLINE

A recommendation that flax permit declines on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. Very active trading saw heavy offerings fairly well taken in oats.

Some export business was noted in barley and flax uncovered some Eastern demand. Rye had American houses on both sides of the market.

Selectivity Increases On Market

By BILL DANIELS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Under fairly selective buying pressure which worked their way [illegible] markets last [illegible]

The cautious and selected manner that has been the policy of investors during the Stock Exchange's drive for the 25 mark this week accentuated this week. Investors were showing more interest in the market than they have for weeks but they were being careful with their money. Key issues that lead the market and the odd promising mine held their attention. As a result industrial stocks pushed ahead while the bulk of the market moved slowly.

Canadian markets started the week with little significance. On Monday prices barely moved as trading began its 11th slow week. Features developed Tuesday and by the close a handful of minor declines had pulled prices [illegible] lower.

Prices held about steady Wednesday in one of the slowest trading days of the year.

Selective strength began asserting itself Thursday. Key industrial and a handful of base metals lifted prices upward in Toronto while in Montreal paper climbed briskly. Activity picked up.

The advance continued Friday with Toronto Industrials and Base Metals and Montreal Papers again heading the way. The Montreal average for papers was a 1951 peak and the Toronto Stock Exchange industrial index has just under its all-time peak.

Saturday's trading showed a sharp increase. Toronto's turnover of 1,735,000 shares was the greatest it had been since February 21 and quite a contrast to Wednesday's 544,000 shares.

In New York the Associated Press average of 60 stocks from Friday to Friday increased $1.40 at $67.50.

From Friday to Friday the Montreal averages showed papers up 27.40 at 83.15, Industrials up 4.1 at 229.7, banks off 0.01 at 30.25, utilities up 1.4 at 89.2, combined up 3.3 at 182.9 and golds off 1.06 at 63.18.

Brokers Adopt Firmer Policy

TORONTO, May 5 (CP) The Broker Dealers Association of Ontario announces that it is adopting a "firmer policy" in regard to "control and use by some members of literature of an irresponsible type."

The association, which passes on stock-promotion literature of its members, says that while hitherto it has rejected some literature, it has tried to make necessary changes by deleting specific words, sentences and paragraphs where their use was objectionable or illegal.

"This," the association states, "has been based on the assumption that each individual piece of literature as a whole will convey a responsible and creditable impression. Unfortunately, it is admitted has not yet been uniformly achieved.

"Following are examples of practices which will not be condoned:

"Labelling a document an informational bulletin when it contains only exhaustive narratives of an industry or area in general and a minimum of unimportant facts relative to the company in question.

"Suggestions that national or international events or markets will have immediate beneficial effects on a company when in fact such is not the case, and numerous similar practices.

NEW YORK, May 5 (INS) — At long last Al Weill has arranged bout he can use to fill out the end of the Joe Louis-Lee Savold affair scheduled for 12 rounds in the Polo Grounds the night of June 13.

The Savold-Weill bout will go in Madison Square Garden two days later ($150,000 with a $5 top. It may go that far since I won't have any competition in advance.

The Savold-Louis bout is a horse of a different color. It may be the fight of the year. Savold is a big, strong fellow, likely to hit for a long time, with a chance.

Louis is now 36 and showed definite signs of wear around most.

But both can punch and Savold has a habit of coming to life in the end.

Louis has shown that he has a lot of fighting guts to catch up with a good boy like Savold. Actually if the opponent loves around a little.

But Savold is not a set-up and Joe will have both hands full at most of the way. Savold has the whole staggering combination.

The fight will be a test of whether Louis has lost the zip he had with the bombers.

Savold has a punch. He has a good left hook. Lem had a weak right hand. Phil Scott, Jersey Joe Walcott, Ezzard Charles and Lee Savold have been a good boxer — a better boxer than Louis ever was.

He uses his left hand and we think he will have to use it against Joe. He must shoot the works in a hurry.

The fight will be a test of Savold's ability to go 15 rounds. Louis has only had to travel more than six rounds in a walk if it goes.

Your reporter was one of those who picked Louis the other night when he was matched to fight Arturo Godoy in his fourth. When his chief fault appeared Joe had "quit on his feet" the fourth round.

Savold looks like a good boy. He has a good left hook and a mean so much in his corner. He might have much luck against him as they say in the ring forget what he slapped Bruce Woodcock in four rounds.

He is fighting Louis because he has been around and knows Louis that he must against Woodcock and lucked out for a good result.

It will be interesting to watch Savold with Louis. You should have a lot of fun watching Savold really can punch.

Capilanos Due to Play Four-Game Series Here

Bill Schuster, who has Vancouver Capilanos away to the fastest start in the Western International League since Salem opened with a 13 game winning streak a few years ago, has his club in Victoria for the first time this season. The Caps will play a four game series at Athletic Park.

The Caps pack power with a strong defence and a capable mound staff. There are few weak spots in the batting line-up.

Ex Athletic Bob McGuire patrols left field and gives the Caps a lead off man who is hitting .277 at the present time. Dick Sipkowski and Charlie Mead, hitting third and fourth with batting averages of .361 and .412, respectively, are the veteran outfielders, with Bob Brunswick alternating with Mead in right field for left-handed pitching. Brunswick, a former teammate of McGuire's at Washington State College, is hitting .235.

STRONG INFIELD

Veteran Ray Tran at short and Dave Cates, with Yakima last year at second give the Caps a strong double play combination in an exercise of baseball that looks natural defensively. Manager Schuster had done the job with veterans for the past few years. Ray Tran is from the University of San Francisco. First base duties are shared by Lindower Bob McLean and Dick Abernathy, who are pitcher's batting average. Schuster, .167; Vick, .182; Tran, .300; Cates, .250, and Abernathy, .333. McLean has not played enough games to appear in the official averages yet.

Smarking the club at present [illegible] who was [illegible] Bellingham [illegible] 18 games in the Pacific Coast League last season and [illegible] .329.

MOUND STAFF

The pitching staff is headed by Bob Rhodes, who [illegible] and Ken Crosby. Crosby [illegible] and has put a record of four complete games. Rhodes has his first four starts and a relief win. Rounding out the mound corps are Bill White, who finished the season with the Caps last year; Dan Tiberatt, up from Yakima of the Sunset League and Pete Hernandez, former University of Southern California hurler. McLean and Abernathy are used in relief roles.

Baseball Rule On Broadcasts Being Tested

JOPLIN, Mo., May 5 (AP) — A count [illegible] on the broadcasting [illegible] hints the [illegible] of their league games in a home town as playing at home.

William H. Clark, president of Radio Station KFSB in Joplin, fired a shot which echoed [illegible] the St. Louis Cardinals and the Joplin baseball club with consideration to be cited of trade.

Clark asked for an injunction against the two baseball teams and the Cardinal Broadcasting Co., to prevent Ryan Inc. to [illegible] from broadcasting the KFSB broadcasts of Cardinal games.

KFSB aired the Card games Tuesday and Friday while Joplin appeared at home.

Clark said Hoffstaedt and Ryan later advised the station that minor league officials protested the broadcast and that the Cardinal games will be discontinued if such action is repeated.

Clark said KFSB plans to continue the Cardinal broadcast and will carry its case to the highest court if necessary.

Junior Toppers To Compete With Seniors

The Women's Softball League will operate as a four-team circuit composed of three senior clubs and one junior team this year. The teams are Reds, Sidney, Merle Ramblers and Toppers.

The junior Toppers will compete with the three senior clubs in league play, beginning May 7 for the Jack Taylor Memorial Trophy. Reds, Sidney and Ramblers will then open a competition for the city championship, with Toppers reverting to junior status for play-off competition.

Tom Windwood has been elected league president with Mrs. Wilma Neal as treasurer. Wally Yeamans is vice president. A secretary will be named later.

League schedule for May follows:

Two Newcomers Running In Commissioner Stakes

NEW YORK, May 5 (INS). — Two new dark horse candidates — a university athletic director and a former minor league club president were injected tonight into the baseball commissionership sweepstakes.

Along with such prominent names as Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former postmaster general James Farley and major league president George M. Trautman, the newcomers were rumored to be on a list of candidates to be considered when a committee of clubowners meets within the next few days.

REPORTED ASKED

Dr. Eddie Whelan, a Savannah, Ga., surgeon and ex-president of the Savannah Club of the Sally League, was reported to have been asked by a major league club executive if he would accept the commissioner's job.

At the same time International News Service was informed that University of Pennsylvania athletic director Fran Murray has been approached as a possible successor to A. B. Chandler.

Longer Season Considered For P.C.H.L.

SEATTLE, May 5 (AP) — The Pacific Coast Hockey League's proposal to change its playing schedule and have it run one or more weekend dates to open in the spring.

The matter will be discussed here Thursday and Friday at the annual meeting of the league officials, Seattle's Frank Foster, who is retiring. He succeeded Monty G. Van Horne last Monday.

Leader said several rule changes will be discussed including possibility of eliminating the centre line. The controversial question of overtime play also will be aired.

Cement Courts For Vancouver

VANCOUVER, May 5 (CP) — For the first time, Vancouver is to have some fast, cement tennis courts.

Two units, patterned after the plush Seattle Tennis Club courts, will be built by the Vancouver Lawn Tennis and Badminton Club at a cost of $6,000.

California, which has produced many top U. S. players has many of the fast courts, which some call a necessity for the development of junior players.

Mark Cracked By Bill Parnell

PULLMAN, Wash., May 5 (AP) — Bill Parnell of Vancouver ran a 4:18.6 mile today to set a meet record as Washington State College won a close northern division Pacific Coast Conference dual track meet from Oregon 68½ to 62½. The old meet record of 4:21.1 was set in 1946.

Everton, Sheffield Clubs Drop to Second Division

London, May 5 (Reuters)—Everton, one of the 12 original members of the English Soccer League when it was formed in 1888, go down to the second division next season as a result of losing [illegible] game.

Manchester City, drawing 2-2 with Grimsby Town, gained the single point it needed to move up from the second division into the first.

It displaced Preston North End, which has been in the first division since 1939. Preston will take over the two vacant championship spots as well as the relegated Everton spot when the first division starts its next season.

Sheffield Wednesday whipped Everton 6-0 but Chelsea with a 4-0 victory over Bolton Wanderers, kept its total goal average ahead of the Owls.

Everton has spent only one season in the second division in 63 years of football. Sheffield Wednesday was promoted to the top division only last year.

A Home Is as Good as Its Plumbing

One of the most important factors in our standard of living and yet one most frequently taken for granted is the plumbing in the home. From the log cabin in the bush to the most opulent residence of state, the one element that marks the many shades of difference is the plumbing.

In the old days many homes were considered adequate as regards their plumbing if they boasted one toilet, one bath, one wash basin, one kitchen sink and perhaps one set of laundry tubs. Anyone who owned a home was ahead of the standard-minded to the interests of their owners. But there is hardly a family living in these homes which, if they were to be built again would not insist on at least two toilets, a shower and at least one extra wash basin, probably in a powder room for the convenience of guests.

Homes with ample plumbing facilities invariably bring more when sold than do homes less fortunately equipped. Nor is the extra plumbing trends a matter of convenience or luxury. For along with the trend to better plumbing in the home has come a corresponding trend in the improvement in health and in longevity—and such of this can be attributed directly to the plumbing.

Then authorities say, while the interior decorator is all to the good and the taste of the home it is the plumber who sets the standard of the health of its occupants and who contributes most to its real value.

Probably no room in the house offers a greater opportunity for the exercise of ingenuity in planning than the bathroom. Here is a room that first of all should be practical but at the same time the chance to make it colorful and charming must not be overlooked.

In planning a bathroom the most convenient arrangement of fixtures in the available space must be taken into consideration. But the location of these fixtures in relation to the piping and necessary vents is also an important part of the plan.

For All-Year Comfort BLANKETIZE with "Westroc" Wool
What To Look For In Choosing Insulation
Many materials are popularly supposed to provide "insulation". But only genuine Rock Wool provides all the necessary properties of a complete insulating material.
Insulation must keep heat in—keep heat out—for year-round comfort. Rock Wool is especially made for this purpose—it is not a leftover by-product of some other process.
Insulation should be permanent. Rock Wool will not rot or deteriorate.
Fire-safety is important. Rock Wool does not require artificial fire-proofing. It will not burn, and will act as a fire-stop. It will not conduct electricity.
Rock Wool is moisture-resistant and non-corrosive. It has no odor and will not attract vermin.

Long Shot Count Turf Derby Winner: Purse, Crowd Bets Shatter Record

LOUISVILLE May 5 (AP) The greatest crowd ever to witness a Kentucky Derby roared approval today as Count Turf a Field horse, was ridden to victory by little Conn McCreary in the 77th running of the classic.

Never seriously considered in spite race predictions as the boy on Count Turf the 43 Derby winner took charge of things [illegible] He was wire to wire under the wire.

Royal Mustang came up fast in the stretch to finish second Ruhe finished third and Fair D another of the five horses which composed the field was fourth. Not one of the favored colts ever seriously figured in the big scramble.

PAID $31.20

Count Turf owned by J J Amiss a New York City [illegible] paid $31.20 for each $2 wagered on him.

Royal Mustang did even better, paying off a whopping $53.00 for the place Ruhe paid back $7.80 [illegible]

[illegible] to Amiss [illegible] 3 year old [illegible] Fair D [illegible] 44 Derby. He was [illegible] down the stretch.

PROUD

[illegible] had he watched the third general perform today.

Here was the final order of the [illegible]

Count Turf, Royal Mustang Ruhe, Phil D Fanfare Battle Morn, Arrowtime Pat Safe, Hall of Fame, Timely Reward Counterpoint, Repentre King Clover, Some, Sir Bee Bam Single Fighting Back, Big Stretch, Golden Birch and Mamelure.

Count Turf ran the [illegible] 2:02 1-5. The record for the [illegible] and the distance was set by Whirlaway in 1941. His time was 2:01 1-5.

PLACE $53

Count Turf paid $31.20 $14.00 and $8.60. Royal Mustang paid $53.00 and $24.80. Ruhe paid $7.80.

More money was poured through the mutuel machines than ever before in the long history of the race. The total bet on the Derby at the track was $1,294,474, compared with the previous record of $1,253,042 set in 1947, the year Assault won.

JUMPED IN TIME

GRAN' PAS[illegible] was [illegible] when he saw the [illegible] of a motor car apparently out of control bearing down on him. With his wife he jumped to safety and the car crashed into the store.

NO. 123—NINETY-THIRD YEAR | VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, SUNDAY, MAY 6, 1951 | SECOND NEWS SECTION

"Operation Headache" Shifts Newspapers to New Plant

Here are the two men in charge of "Operation Headache" . . . transfer of 168 tons of machinery and furniture from plants of The Daily Colonist and The Times to new quarters at Fountain Circle. Chief responsibility for move rests with Cam Watchman (left), managing director of Victoria Presses Ltd., and former mailroom foreman of The Colonist. He is assisted by Frank Mack, mechanical superintendent of Victoria Press.

The pressmen in charge do their last day's work at The Colonist Broad Street plant. Charles Chilcott, left, Colonist pressroom foreman, started his apprenticeship in Victoria in 1907 and has worked continuously for this newspaper for 44 years. J. B. Hubbersty, right, ad foreman, has worked here since . . .

Staff . . . The men and women in business and advertising staffs work on for The Daily Colonist and The Times. Two newspapers are sharing mechanical equipment and services of advertising employees in the move and a greater efficiency. But struggle to be first with the news will continue.

Big sign level with Colonist newsroom at new $1,000,000 building near Fountain Circle reminds this newspaper's thousands of friends that nothing about Old Lady of Broad Street has changed except her location.

Esquimalt Queen Iris Hamilton, 14

AROUND TOWN

Iris Hamilton has been named Esquimalt May Queen for 1951.

The 14-year-old student at Lampson Street School will be crowned next Friday evening at the municipality's May Queen coronations to be held in the Memorial Park.

Her selection was made by members of the Esquimalt and Saanich Parks Department. Parents Commissioner and Barbara Clark to [illegible] the Rose, two of the contestants.

Ladies-in-waiting will be Marion Hooper, Catherine White, Barbara Marsh and Joan Christie. Servers as pages are Barbara Brooks and Marion Leggett, with Adele Bryant and Patty Kemp as train-bearers.

Flower girls elected are Joan Street, Joan Lilley, Green, Linda Mary and Marcia Reynolds, Betty Thornbury, Diane Stoney, Judith Hurtle and Gloria Eby.

Coronation of the queen by Mrs. A. Pearce will precede the annual garden party sponsored by the Esquimalt Community Club.

DOG CLUB

George Donaldson has been re-elected president of the Greater Victoria Dog Obedience Club.

Other officers re-elected were Mrs. D. B. Hudson, secretary-treasurer; Hunter Smith, first vice-president, and J. M. Green, second vice-president. Dr. T. M. Jones was named honorary president.

A note of optimism was struck at the annual meeting as membership zoomed from 29 at the start of the year to 99 at the end. Eighty-eight dogs passed through the club's classes during the year.

After a year's discussion the club is to have printed ribbons in the club colors.

The well-attended meeting was treated to two training films.

Children To Lose Playhouse

By RAY BAINES

A group of laughing Saanich youngsters had a party yesterday but their gaiety was tempered with a little sadness.

The party was arranged by Douglas Dane, 173 Hampton Road, to "celebrate" a Saanich building inspector's order to demolish or remove a playhouse from his property because it did not comply with the zoning by-law.

Last week Mr. Dane moved the little house on to his property to serve as a playhouse for his own and a dozen neighborhood children.

Acting on what Mr. Dane called "a very unkind complaint" from a resident, the Saanich building inspector wrote and told him to get rid of the building or "at once" because the zoning by-law prohibited buildings other than dwellings and private garages.

SO MANY CARS

"We realize that the Saanich building inspector is only doing his job," Mr. Dane said yesterday. "But surely in this day and age with so many cars on the road children should be allowed a playhouse."

Mrs. Dane said she thought the complainants were "most unkind" as the playhouse could not be seen from the road and did not block anyone's view.

"About a dozen children have been coming every day to play in the house," Mrs. Dane said "and if they were not here their parents would be chasing them all over the country."

Mr. Dane said it had "cost considerable money" to move the little building to his property and he felt that "regardless of the by-law, children in the whole neighborhood benefited."

The eight-by-four-foot playhouse was filled with children's dishes and doll beds and was decorated inside.

Mr. Dane said he hoped that the Saanich officials might still find some solution because there was no doubt that the children's parents were "all for the idea."

"We sure hope we can keep our playhouse. It's lot's of fun," said one little girl yesterday.

Colonist Photos by Bill Kinnear and Jim Ryan

Crowded Broad Street was in turmoil, and sidewalk superintendents gathered in hundreds as spectacular move of The Daily Colonist and its rival, The Times got under way. The Times move, pictured here, was done by daylight. The Colonist moved late at night under floodlights. Linotypes weighing ton and a half and valued at $11,000 each were lowered by Hendry's big cranes.

Ready to Take Up Beat

Huge Black Press Groomed for Action As 168 Tons of Equipment Make Move

By BARNEY McKINLEY

A huge five-unit Goss press, a monster as big and black as a mountain locomotive, stood oiled and ready today to take up the beat of Victoria's newspaper production.

Final tune-up on the mechanical giant, capable of turning out 40,000 papers an hour, was being conducted by a crew of skilled machinists from the United States and Canada.

Huge rolls of paper were already in place, the blank drums poised to receive the impression of the world's news.

Crews of pressmen were at standby, waiting for the signal to take up the job carried thus far by the presses of the city's two newspapers in their Broad Street quarters.

The monster stood waiting in the spacious basement of the new $1,000,000 Victoria Press Building near Fountain Circle as the first composing room machines were lowered into place.

Fittingly that first machine was an intertype, the machine that sets heads, the stories in a nutshell at the top of newspaper columns that point up the contents below.

It was the first of a total of 168 tons of equipment, worth more than $500,000 being transported from old homes to the new.

Moving on the shuttling vans were linotypes, hi-reds, the world's latest in circulation, news stories, their big, chatter-proof mats, stereotype and machine-tool parts, machinists' tools.

Delicate photographic equipment was also being placed or moved to the new fact-room. Chief concern was to keep dust, as coming steel and wood machine tool parts is ground.

One jar here could knock $500 into the ash can.

And the accumulation of a 52-year furniture was being packed and moved in a Spring cleaning of unprecedented proportions.

The whole business was in the newspaper saga class, a feat not often attempted in history. Even as huge mechanisms were put in place, out-moded bits of equipment were being dismantled in the shops to which they would be moved.

And near the Fountain Circle a new printing press was ready to start pre-heat.

"Who's Lost?"

Colonist Photo by Ron Baird

Happy at being in "protective custody" of city police Constable Ray Maitland was three-year-old Jimmy Carter who spent nearly all Saturday afternoon waiting in police charge office until someone could identify him. Worried father finally arrived to collect youngster and told police he was puzzled as to how Jimmy could get all the way from his Island Highway home into city.

Last Day in Playhouse

Relishing their last day in playhouse at home of Douglas Dane, 173 Hampton Street, group of Saanich children don't quite understand why it has to be "demolished or removed at once." Order from Saanich building inspector says little building is contrary to zoning by-law and must go. Children are Juanita Sturrock, Ronald Sturrock and (right) Joan Dunn. One-and-a-half-year-old collie Beauty doesn't favor Saanich order much either. Complaint from "unkind" neighbor, says Mrs. Dane, set wheels of municipal law in motion.

Radio Stations Help Locate Lost Child

Three-year-old Jimmy Carter got a big kick out of getting lost Saturday afternoon.

But while the youngster sat and listened to radio calls in the city police station, thoughtfully sucking his thumb and looking bug-eyed every time a constable walked in, people were trying to figure out who he was and others were trying to find out where he was.

A fireman spotted the little fellow outside a mid-town Government Street hotel early in the afternoon and took him to the police station.

There Jimmy sat in a big chair, smiled in a friendly way but wouldn't tell inquisitive constables his name or where he came from.

In the meantime his worried father had notified the R.C.M.P. Someone else called Radio Station CKDA and asked them to have Jimmy's description broadcast.

A Colonist reporter at the police station asked the lad his name.

"Jimmy," he piped.

So the reporter asked CJVI to put Jimmy's description on the air. CJVI told the reporter to phone CKDA which already knew about Jimmy. Police called CKDA and someone there notified Jimmy's father.

Jimmy's father came down to the police station and told the police he couldn't understand how Jimmy could get all the way from his home at 652 Island Highway into town by himself.

"I've aged 20 years this afternoon," he said.

Then he marshaled Jimmy off home.

Oak Bay High School

Dr. John M. Ewing, principal of Victoria College, visited Oak Bay High School on Monday morning and spoke to the pupils, between the [illegible] periods.

Dr. Ewing stressed the importance of a college education and the benefits and opportunities [illegible] at the college. He also [illegible] to the students on the various courses offered at Victoria College, the extra-curricular and sports activities available to all college students. Dr. Ewing also distributed booklets containing all the details of Victoria College life to the pupils.

The planning committee of the [illegible] is holding a meeting on Monday afternoon. Menu details of the graduation banquet and dance have not yet been arranged. The graduation ceremony will be held in the evening, the week after next week [illegible] the graduation dance on Friday, June 8. June 8 is the night of the banquet and Mr. Don Oliver with a [illegible] dance. In other words it is "The night."

The committee also went [illegible] to the Monterey restaurant, Thursday evening, to make final arrangements for the banquet menu.

DANCE

The last school dance of the year will be the sports dance, the social finale of the inter-house sports day on May 16. Refreshments will be sold at the dance. The dress is sports [illegible] and the [illegible] for the girls.

In the spotlight House meetings were held Tuesday noon by the opposite [illegible] for the Inter-house track and field meet on May 16. Hopeful participants have been practising for [illegible] weeks now. The inter-school meet is on May 23.

Inter-school senior boys' baseball league began the 1951 season on Thursday afternoon. The Oak Bay team played Mount Douglas at Macdonald Park.

Members of the senior Rugby team, Lee Howard Russell Cup dance on Friday, June 1. June 8 is the night of the banquet and Mr. Don Oliver with a [illegible] dance. In other words it is "The night." The committee also went [illegible] to their coach.

Teen Tastes In Clothes

By DEE LAVOIE
Victoria High School

Coming into their own with the advent of summer weather are the white sandals favored by the teenage set for warm-weather wear. Bloch-colored shoes to match gay cotton dresses are also to be seen, but white is preferred. [illegible] dress is strictly [illegible] and the [illegible] for the girls.

Sun tan lotion is a must, and [illegible] tan.

For that feet-and-ankle look, narrow strapped sandals are the latest rage in [illegible] shoe. Some of these are little more than straps and a sole, and have a [illegible] effect. Gold [illegible] perfect for wear with party pretty duds as well as more casual outfits.

Other sandals are a little more substantial, having open toe and heel with openwork for a lighter appearance. Gold [illegible] adds a bit of glitter to these.

Pets of last summer, those perky bucskin, have turned up but were not the [illegible] favorite. Even these [illegible] seems to have almost died out.

NEW MOCCASINS

Taking their place as the smartest [illegible] could be those in black or green [illegible] suede that are styled with thick white rubber soles and white lacing. They're showing up on so many fashionable feet around the high schools.

A [illegible] that would [illegible] a real [illegible] among [illegible] are the white [illegible] for white [illegible] shoes. Not the [illegible] practical shoe, but [illegible] dress [illegible] for street wear. These are [illegible] the [illegible] of the present [illegible] [illegible] are [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

(Our Land)

By FRANK KELLEY

ONE of my most interesting excursions before leaving Barkley Sound, during my first Summer thereabouts, was over a rough trail from Ucluelet to Amphitrite Point. It was somewhere off that lighthouse promontory that the British sloop of war Condor went missing with all hands one wild December night. The only tangible evidence of the disaster ever given up by the sea was one of the vessel's lifeboats. It had been found by an Ahousat Indian. Captain Tozier (I think the name is correct) of the U.S. cutter Grant secured it by trading his dress sword, which the native had coveted on first sight. The boat was returned to Esquimalt.

ROCKING GOLD

Another bit of color was furnished when I undertook a hike from the western end of Ucluelet Harbor across to Wreck Bay, where there were several men engaged in "rocking" flour gold shoveled from the beach. This fine gold, associated with black (iron) sand, was concentrated with natural action of heavy rain and ocean waves. The ribbon of ground where the concentration was effected was particularly rich after heavy storms. They were making wages, I was told, and were apparently happy about it as they sang intermittently, for my benefit maybe, bits of doggerel.

ON LONG BEACH

That hike, for I went prepared to keep on going, was continued along that lovely stretch of hard-pressed sand called Long Beach, miles in length, one time since to be considered as a taking-off run for a Kingsford Smith hop over the Pacific. I had my entire outfit with me. It included a small silk tent, ground cloth, couple of four-point blankets, "billy-can," trypan, hand adze, carbine, some pancake flour, oatmeal, rice, a bit of bacon, tea, sugar, salt, a wax candle and matches — the whole weighing about 65 pounds, all tucked into the ground cloth and held compact with pack-strap harness. On the level it rode easy enough; but on a sidehill it could be a trifle heavy and bite into the shoulders.

LOTS OF LAND

There was little to see of the soil bordering Long Beach. It was hidden by matted salal and stunted, wind-twisted conifers and gale-blown sand piled against their roots. Behind that fringe there was a lot of land which could be utilized for pastoral purposes. I was told it was of the same character I had observed in my jaunts from Ucluelet to Amphitrite and Ucluelet to Wreck Bay, where the black soil supported an almost tropical growth of shrubbery and nine-prop timber. This surveyors have declared to be potential agricultural land, worth while clearing for settlement projects.

Not having been broken into "back-packing" by the time the west end of Long Beach was reached, I was not enthused over a bush trail hike to Tofino; but got a lucky break when a fisherman happened along behind Boat Island and gave me a lift to Clayuquot, on Stubbs Island.

CLAYOQUOT SOUND

Through the eyes of the Summer day holiday seeker, Clayuquot Sound is lots and presents the widest possible diversity of scenic appeal—numerous picturesque fiords, tree-clothed hills, many, many islands of all sizes, featuring stretches of delight-exciting beaches. Stubbs Island, for instance, has practically one continuous stretch of wide, sandy foreshore. And such sand, as white as sand can be, and your feet go ankle deep with every step. There are other beaches, too, of similar character on the seaward fronts of all the islands.

FOR A RESORT

A good spot for a tip-top resort is Matilda Creek, on Flores Island. A deep-water harbor, it is also the site of the Indian village of the Ahousats, once powerful tribe, and headquarters for the Gibson enterprises. Started by pioneer W. F. Gibson, these include logging operations, a fish plant and sawmill. A short distance from the head of the harbor are medicinal springs, long used by natives and for many years patronized by West Coast fishermen.

Efforts have been made to popularize these springs in the past in connection with the round-trip voyages of the C.P.R. boats to Quatsino. These springs are no great distance from a sand beach-ribbed bay on the ocean side of the island, and would provide an ideal setup for a resort once the long-talked-of road from Port Alberni via the lake-dotted land west to Ucluelet and Tofino is built.

PLAY ACTORS

The natives of this area would co-operate for the development of Clayuquot Sound as a rendezvous for tourists looking for something different. The natives at Ahousat, a few years ago, I understand, had ambitions of their own. They built a theatre after their own designs in which they displayed the range of emotions their ancestors were in the habit of portraying when "play-acting" had an important part in the communal life of the Coast Indian. Annals of the tribe have many bits of action for reproduction, as well as folk-drama. They are all natural-born actors, but whether their stage directors will show how the tribe, according to tradition, defied and got the best of the Royal Navy, is something for conjecture just now. Such a play might not be too far-fetched.

THE STORY

The particulars are contained in a book written by Gilbert Malcolm Sproat and entitled "Scenes and Studies of Savage Life."

The Kingfisher, a trading schooner, had been decoyed near the shore by an Ahousat chieftain, who had told the captain he had a quantity of oil he wished to trade. The chief killed the captain and others of the tribe did away with the crew. The bodies were mutilated and thrown into the salt water, the schooner was looted and burned. The outrage sent Admiral Denman to Clayoquot Sound aboard H.M.S. Sutlej during October, 1864.

According to the report made by Admiral Denman, freely quoted by Sproat, a lot of palavering took place, but the chief actors on the native side were difficult to contact. Some punitive expeditions were undertaken with some casualties on both sides. The Indians involved in the Kingfisher affair had dispersed to other reserves, with which the area has always been well-studded, and the affair dragged along into the Autumn of 1865, following an armistice, providing a month's grace.

At the end of that month, the Indians were to deliver the guilty ones and the Sutlej was to return from Victoria. Evidently there were other more serious matters for the attention of Admiral Denman at that time. The war craft did not return then or later, with the result the Ahousats got into the habit of boasting how the King George Navy had suffered defeat and Chief Chip-chak had added to his reputation, becoming the bold leader who "defied and baffled the English of King George war vessels."

Person-to-Person Sketches of Men Who Serve on Ship and Shore in Victoria's Port

By RAY WORMALD

CAPT. G. Ronald Newell holds a "three-in-one" job which is vital to Victoria's port activities.

Holding the assorted postings since August of 1946, the veteran mariner serves as the city's port warden, harbor master and shipping master. And he is certainly well qualified for the jobs.

A native of Yarmouth, N.S., "Cap" is one of a family which for many generations has been closely associated with ships and the seven seas. His forbears were skippers of Nova Scotia clippers in early days of Canada's shipping history.

His early schooling was taken on the East Coast and continued at Esquimalt schools when the family moved to Victoria early in 1918. Upon leaving the class rooms, he went to sea as a cadet, when about 16, with the Canadian Government Merchant Marine—serving aboard the Canadian Importer and the Canadian Inventor.

The fourth and final year of his cadetship was spent aboard the C.P.R.'s Empress of Asia—on the trans-Pacific run. At the age of 21 he was serving with the Empress of Russia as third officer. Early 1927 saw "Cap" leave the "Empress" fleet for the Canadian National Steamships. With that line until late in 1932, he was aboard ships operating between Montreal and the West Indies. He stood by during completion of the C.N.'s Lady Nelson in England.

Later he was navigating officer of that ship, the Lady Somers and Lady Rodney.

In 1933 he returned to Victoria and joined Island Tug & Barge Ltd., a firm in which his father (Capt. G. M. Newell) had served as marine superintendent for many years. With the local towing firm, "Cap" was master of the ocean-going tugs Anyox and the Island Commander; also relieving master of the Snohomish. Towing operations took him southward to San Pedro, north to the Aleutian Islands.

He had received his master's foreign-going certificate early in 1932.

Leaving the towing firm in 1942, he joined—as master—the Crown-owned and operated Park Steamship Company. One of his first duties was commissioning of the 10,000-ton Tecumseh Park at Vancouver, which he commanded for some time before commissioning another 10,000-tonner, the Bowness Park, also at Vancouver. Time spent with these ships saw "Cap" in practically all war theatres.

In August 1946, he left the Park Steamship Co. to accept his present job—succeeding the late Capt. G. A. Goring.

His jobs are many and varied. He has control of all craft entering and leaving the port. Duties include routine checks of every ship in local waters. He makes detailed surveys of all timber-laden vessels leaving for sea. Attention to matters pertaining to articles of agreement and caring for records of all seamen signing on or off ships of this port are but two of a host of other responsibilities.

"Cap" and his attractive wife (the former Evelyn MacFarlane) live at 3763 Cadboro Bay Road. He is a popular member of the city's Rotary Club, the Uplands golf course, and is chairman of the Seamen's Institute at the foot of Superior Street.

Ghost Ship Curse Held to the End

By EX-SUPT. BOB FABIAN
Of Scotland Yard

Archduke Ferdinond Once Owned Her, but Her Record Was One That Brought Disaster. She Burned and One Man Went to Prison

THE white steam yacht Sayonara fluttered disaster like a skull-and-crossbones above her sumptuous prow.

Death stalked her decks and in her last blazing hour she dragged a man into ruin with her.

She had been built for the Archduke Ferdinand of Austria, and had cost him £100,000. Even the washbasin taps were gilded. At the yacht-warming party European noblemen whose own yachts had cost a mere small fortune tipped abashed along her gold and mahogany corridors.

The Archduke Ferdinand sailed splendidly to Belgrade. It was 1914. At Sarajevo, up the river, he was assassinated by the revolver shot that "echoed round the world" to start the Great War.

An American millionaire bought her. He was determined not to be scared off by growing rumors of accidents and nightmares aboard the vessel.

He fitted a couple of cocktail bars, installed a silver-and-onyx sheer bath, unfurled his bank-roll at the teak masthead—and sailed home to the land of opportunity. He was in the full, sun-burned vigor of middle age.

At New York he was assisted ashore, a faltering bewildered invalid.

Other owners came and departed. By 1939 the British Admiralty was offered the Sayonara for five shillings!

The Admiralty rechristened her, amputated her prow of gilded figurehead from the white bows.

After the war a firm purchased her out of the Navy. Yard, equipped her as a floating luxury showroom for British businessmen—to be commercial travelers of the world.

"SELL HER!"

She made one voyage of 32 days between Southampton and South Africa, via Las Palmas and Takoradi. At Durban the firm thankfully abandoned ship.

"Sell her!" they cabled their London agents.

That was in March, 1947. That same month an expensive car hafted outside the shipping agents' offices. From it stepped a young man in a hand-sewn suit.

"I'm looking for some kind of steam-yacht to transform into a passenger vessel," he said pleasantly. We will call him Mr. David Stoneham. .

Mr. Stoneham had acquired a quick, adroit fortune after demobilization from the R.A.F. as a flight-Lieutenant. It was probably about £20,000 to £30,000, made from a chain of catering establishments. Now, he wished to go into the shipping business.

So he bought the Sayonara for £16,000, brought her to Southampton, where rows of cabins were installed in her.

MOUNTING DEBT

Mr. Stoneham insured her for £35,000, arranged three voyages to South Africa with a crew of 30 and nearly 100 passengers.

But the curse still lurked. The Board of Trade would not grant a loadline licence. The vessel could not take passengers without it.

Mr. Stoneham went desperately seeking private charter.

And for a few weeks it seemed he had won. He was offered £495 a month for nine months, payable in advance, by the film company making "The Blue Lagoon," who wished to sail their team to the South Seas in the Sayonara.

At the last moment the film magnates shrugged sadly, "Sorry, old boy—dollar difficulties, you know!"

Stoneham mortgaged his vessel with the Midland Bank at Southampton as security against his rising overdraft.

On March 1, 1948, three hours after midnight, she burst into flames. Soon she was a scorched hulk.

Southampton police received routine reports. Sergeant Tom Culling, an ex-navy man, went to see Mr. Stoneham.

"What d'you think caused the fire, sir?" Mr. Stoneham did not seem to know. "Perhaps internal combustion," he said. "Some of the mattresses were damp."

PICTURE CLUE

Sergeant Tom Culling, worried, spoke to Chief Detective-Inspector Gordon Baker.

"I've slept on ship's mattresses that oozed and squeaked water, sir, and they never caught fire. It doesn't seem right to me, somehow."

Chief Inspector Baker pricked shrewd ears. "Let's see the photos of the damaged vessel," he said.

Two brown smudges showed outstandingly dark against the Sayonara's scorched white hull.

"There must have been two main outbreaks to that fire," said Baker.

"Ridiculous," said Mr. David Stoneham. "Obviously the fire started in the for'ard companionway, blew down the corridor and descended the stairs of the companionway aft. There were no two points of conflagration. It was simply that the fire started at one point, traveled downwards to the second."

Baker and his C.I.D. men secured the ship, sifted charred debris, examined twisted and blackened wreckage with care.

It went on for days. At last Baker came to Dr. J. B. Firth of Preston, leading arson expert for the Home Office.

"Those stairs in the aft companionway, Doctor," he said, "The vertical parts are badly burned, but the 'treads' are not. What does that mean?"

Dr. Firth examined the blackened stairway. "That means," he said solemnly, "that the fire climbed up those stairs, and did not descend them. Therefore the fire must have begun simultaneously at two points. Therefore, since it was a cold, dead ship, it must have been arson!"

END OF A SHIP

The jury at Hampshire Assizes thought so, too. Stoneham was sentenced to three years' imprisonment.

Even that did not satiate the grendins of the Sayonara. When the hulk of the ship was being towed to the breaker's yard, a workman was trapped in a steam-tube, overcome by carbon monoxide poisoning, and two men almost died trying to release him.

Today there is no Sayonara. She was dismantled into very tiny pieces.

Along the Sports Trail

By JOHN BARRINGTON

ONE of life's little mysteries is why tennis uses the strange scoring system that it does. What obscure legerdemain is implied in the strange incantations of the net umpires?

Why, for example, when one player has won two points and his opponent one, is the score given as "30-15" instead of just plain "2-to-1"?

Perhaps it is to distinguish the game score from the set score. But if so, why don't the points have a uniform value? The first point is 15, the next is 30. Logically it seems the third point should be 45. Instead the umpire intones "40" when your opponent catches you flat-footed with that smash down the baseline.

For that matter, why does "deuce" indicate a tie score of three points apiece, or more? Any place else, deuce means two. And—the biggest mystery of all—where does the tennis fraternity get its term "love"?

In tennis, "love" means nothing. But the wife or girl friend will give you a tough time if you try to draw any real life parallels to that.

And if the ordinary layman thinks all this is confusing, well, he's in good company. Because tennis experts are equally baffled about the whys and wherefores of this scoring system. All they seem to know is that it has been going on for years, and thus must be all right.

Being conservative souls, the tennis fathers don't see any reason to change. And why should they? Their scoring system probably is no more arbitrary than that of football or basketball, for example.

As for the mystery of tennis scoring, there even has been a book written on the subject, or at least on the general subject of "Tennis Origins and Mysteries." This book, by Malcolm Whitman, was written about 20 years ago, but nobody seems to have cast any additional light on the matter since.

One of Whitman's chapters is called "The Origin of Love in Scoring." It starts out by saying:

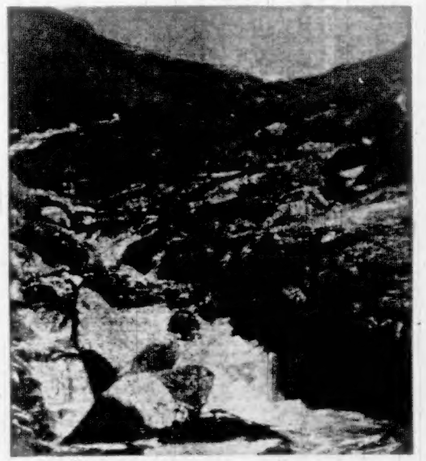
"The players of today who call the scores so glibly may be surprised to know that they speak a language which has been a puzzle for centuries."

Through the Mourne Mountains

FOR three Summers thousands of tourists—many of them from the United States and British Commonwealth countries—have tramped or driven over the famous Mountains of Mourne, in Northern Ireland, oblivious of the fact that 2,000 feet below them workmen were driving a tunnel through the granite to link the Silent and Annalong Valleys. These workers started operations from opposite ends of a two-and-a-half-mile line, and today the tunnel is completed.

The Mourne Mountains "sweep down to the sea" at the southernmost point of County Down, in Northern Ireland. Besides being a magnet for motorists, hikers and other holiday-makers, this magnificent stretch of country is one of the finest watersheds in the United Kingdom. In the Silent Valley the Belfast and District Water Commissioners have a reservoir with a capacity of 3,000 million gallons. Through the new tunnel, seven feet in diameter, an additional 5,000,000 gallons a day will flow from the Annalong Valley. The tunnelling work has cost £300,000. It has still to be lined with concrete, but soon the water will be pouring through.

Besides the water supply from the Mountains of Mourne, the commissioners have a series of reservoirs in the Woodburn area, near Belfast, with a combined capacity of 1,806 million gallons. These reservoirs (which are connected with the Silent Valley) serve a large new viscose rayon factory at Carrickfergus, on the County Antrim shore of Belfast Lough. This new industry, the largest single unit in Northern Ireland's post-World War industrial development program, takes 20,000,000 gallons of water each week.



TUMBLING DOWN its rocky course to a valley of the famous Mountains of Mourne, in Northern Ireland, is this mountain stream which widens into the River Shimna.

Sweet Peppers Vitamin Rich

GREEN PEPPERS turn red or orange as they ripen.

A few plants of sweet peppers, set out in the garden, will give big returns for the space they occupy. They are among the richest of vegetables in vitamins A and C and can be served raw in salads and cooked in many appetizing ways.

Early varieties can be grown from seed sown outdoors, after the ground warms up, but it is better to start plants indoors or buy them in the market. The plants are very tender, and should not be set outdoors until it is safe for tomatoes.

Space the plants 18 inches apart in the row and give them frequent cultivation. They like a rich, heavy soil, but thrive in lighter soils if given plenty of water. The pepper is one plant which likes a bath now and then; it can be washed off with the hose and will thrive the better for it.

They grow rapidly and once they begin to bear they continue to produce fruit until frost kills the plants in the Fall. A dozen plants will usually be sufficient for a family of four.

The only insect likely to attack peppers is a flea beetle, which can be discouraged by spraying or dusting with nicotine or D.D.T. There are no diseases likely to bother.

Sawdust Mulch Tests Made At Saanichton Success

SAWDUST mulch has been successfully used in growing vegetables in preliminary experiments at the Experimental Station at Saanichton, it is reported by R. M. Adamson of the Saanichton station. The tests were conducted in 1950 because of the availability of sawdust in British Columbia at a reasonable cost and because of a growing interest in its use for agricultural purposes.

In the experiments, a two-inch layer of fresh Douglas fir sawdust was applied in the Spring to a prepared seed bed fertilized with a broadcast application of 8-10-5 at the rate of 1,000 pounds per acre. The best method was to take the sawdust back along the row, sowing the seed on the surface of the soil and replacing approximately one inch of sawdust. Excellent germination was obtained with cool season crops and moisture was maintained at the surface of the soil during the Summer when poor conditions for germination existed in the unmulched plots.

BETTER YIELDS

In general, increased yields were obtained from crops growing in the mulched area, due largely to the retention of soil moisture. Soil temperatures were found to be much lower in the mulched plots, particularly during the warmest Summer weather, when a difference between mulched and unmulched treatments of as much as 18 degrees F. was found at a three-inch depth. As a result maturity was retarded in such crops as radish, bean, corn and tomato. In lettuce, however, it was advanced. Because of the later maturity of warm season crops, an important consideration in their culture, they do not appear to be as well adapted to this method as the cool season crops.

IN MID-SUMMER

Mr. Adamson noticed symptoms of nitrogen lack in mid-August in a slowing of growth and paleness of foliage, due to the using up of available nitrate in the surface layers of the soil by the microscopic organisms which decompose the cellulose in the sawdust. It was evident that under similar conditions extra nitrogenous fertilizer would need to be applied. While a more exact amount will have to be determined by experimentation, an extra 100 pounds of actual nitrogen, obtained in 300 pounds of ammonium nitrate, is suggested for close-spaced shallow rooted crops.

Fewer weeds were found in mulch plots, and these appeared to be a higher proportion of perennial weeds than in the unmulched plots, the mulch apparently reducing germination or emergence of annuals. No volunteer grass has been found in the mulched plots during the Winter months.

Little Tricks Save Time

Almost every gardener employs little tricks to enable him to do a job more effectively and quickly. A very simple one that many use is to sow small seeds such as radish, carrot, lettuce, spinach, beet, etc., directly from the packet rather than from the fingers.

At the Experimental Station where there are frequently a comparatively large number of varieties, strains or selected seed lots to be sown in small plots, it is usual to sow by hand rather than with a machine. In such cases the placing of seed by the fingers into the seed drill adds a great deal to the time required for the job. The writer has found that with practice, the seed may be sown as thinly and uniformly direct from the packet and far more quickly. The packet should be of fairly substantial paper and well reinforced at the top. If the envelope is of thin paper which will not stay fairly rigid when held between the fingers, reserve a satisfactory one and transfer to it the seed to be sown. After opening a slit right across the top with a sharp knife, the seed is sown by holding the envelope tilted slightly upwards with one side down, as close as possible to the open drill, and shaking back and forth quickly with short, even strokes. The seed will creep up the lower side and be deposited evenly in the seed drill. With a little practice, the seed can be sown at any desired rate, and at practically a walking pace.

HARDY LILIES

Hardy lilies may be successfully grouped in the perennial border and make a lovely display. There are numerous varieties. Above is illustrated a type known as the Centifolium Olympic Hybrid Lilies. They are particularly lovely and deserve a place in every garden. They should be planted in a well-drained soil. The ideal location is in a sunny position in good loam with a gravelly subsoil. If the ground is clay, dig a hole of at least 15 inches in depth and 12 inches in diameter. On the bottom, place 4 inches of gravel and then an inch of leaf mould or peat moss. If the soil is sandy, use more humus. Place the bulb 6 to 8 inches then tramp firmly and use inch soil to which has been water to settle. Next, place in the hole some added some wood ashes and bone meal. deep with a layer of sharp sand above and below. The lilies should be staked when planted and a label attached. They require a mulching of leaves after the ground freezes.

BEETS are best for the table and for canning when as large as golf balls.

Big Beets Always Good Small Ones Tastiest

BEETS give a heavy yield for the space they take in the home garden, and can be harvested all Summer long and served in many delicious ways.

The height of their quality is reached when they are as big as golf balls; so several sowings at intervals are advisable to keep new crops coming to be harvested in their prime.

If you have trouble growing beets, it may be your soil needs lime. They are among the first vegetables to show bad effects from acid soil. It causes stunted growth, small roots, and too much red and yellow coloring in their leaves.

If your beets showed these symptoms last Summer, be sure to spread lime or limestone screenings over your garden this Spring.

Beet seeds are large and soft; each "seed" in fact is a cluster of seeds and will grow several plants. Sow them one to the inch in a half-inch drill, and firm the soil well over them, because the seeds are rough and air pockets easily form, preventing close contact with the soil.

First thinning may be delayed until the roots have begun to thicken and the leaves are two inches or more wide. At this stage and as long as the leaves remain tender, a dish of beet greens cooked with the tiny beets will be a delight, as well as one of the most nourishing dishes of the season. Thin gradually all along the row, using the excess plants, until the individual plants are four to six inches apart, depending on the fertility of your garden.

At this distance, the beets will grow all Summer, in fertile soil and good varieties remain tender and sweet even when they reach several inches in diameter.

For canning, the small beets are preferable. A row of beets can be sown especially, thinned out gradually and harvested in one day when they have reached the desired size, and the canning crew is ready to operate.

Gardening Hints

While seedlings are small it is wise to take the seed flat away from the window at night, especially if the weather turns cold and windy.

* * *

Spraying and dusting delphiniums, hollyhocks and phlox should begin as soon as the plants start to grow. Bordeaux mixture or sulphur can be used.

* * *

Certain vegetables cannot be transplanted successfully if pulled from the soil. These include melons, cucumbers and squashes. Such plants should be lifted like sod to avoid disturbing the roots.

Flowers for Very Busy People

By THE MASTER GARDENER

GARDENERS with little time need easy-to-grow flowers. Listed below are six of the simplest culture, and for the small lot they are all that are needed. Too many gardeners load up with all sorts of flower seeds, then, finding that they have too little space after all, they limit each to just a few plants. The result is a border which, though better than one at all, is a hodgepodge of all colors, shapes and sizes, and is not nearly so pretty as one having fewer kinds of flowers but in larger masses.

THE ZINNIAS

First choice would be the Zinnia for the ease with which it may be grown, furnishing color in the garden and an abundance of cut flowers for weeks. No annual serves these purposes as well as the Zinnia in its many forms ranging from the tiny lilliputs and the artistic Mexican zinnias to the huge California giant and dahlia flower zinnias. Probably the best all-around strains are the "cut-and-come-again" zinnias. Colors include white, yellow, buff, pink, rose, orange and crimson with blossoms approximately three inches in diameter on stalks from two to two and one-half feet high which require little staking.

Petunias, especially the deep purple and red ones and the pure white ones, serve admirably as a ground cover for bulb beds. Their spreading growth covers the dying foliage effectively. Petunias may be started in a cold frame or sown directly in the garden, but should be thinned out. Where there is room for petunias to spread, the bulcony petunias are preferred since their long stems make them best for cutting.

FOR ODD SPOTS

Sweet alyssum is another indispensable annual serving as a filler for odd spots and corners and as a continuous border the whole length of the flower bed. The seed is sown where it is to flower, scratched lightly into loose soil. In less than six weeks the growing plants are in full, white bloom. Shearing the plants at ten-day intervals first on one side, then the other, will keep them in bloom all Summer.

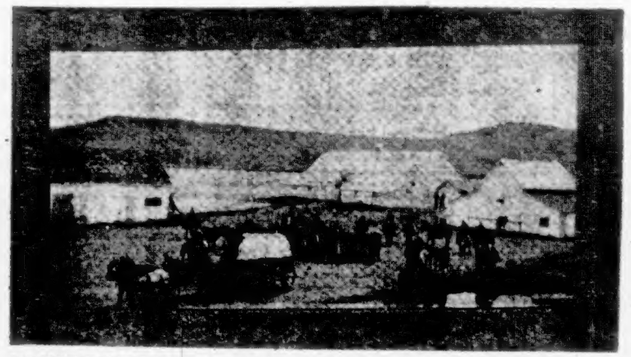
Annual larkspur, with its medium to tall spikes of pink, blue and white, fill the need for taller growing plants in the back of the flower bed and add the necessary areas of blue. Larkspur do not transplant from flats easily, so it is best to sow them where they are to grow very early in the Spring, thinning the plants to three or four inches apart.

TALL MARIGOLDS

Bright yellow French marigolds may grow as high as three feet, but their carnation-like blooms look almost good enough to eat, and they make excellent cutting flowers. Other varieties in bush form may grow only to a height of one foot.

Nicotiana or flowering tobacco, with its deep red, pink and white star-shaped flowers, winds up the list of easy-to-grow annuals. It is a rapid grower from seeds sown directly on the surface of the soil but needs thinning to eight to ten inches apart.

Each of these flowers are disease proof, drought-resistant, and not bothered by insect pests but they all appreciate a fair level of soil fertility. This means that a light application of plant food before planting is very much in order, although too much may cause stalkiness and small blooms.



THE DOUGLAS OUTFIT, chuck-waggon and all, leaving headquarters for the 1911 Spring round up.

The Douglas Lake Ranch

By L. G. TEMPLE

WHEN you have a ranch big enough to require 50 miles of private telephone line for communication between the headquarters and various sub-headquarters; if you butcher 20 hogs twice a year to cure enough bacon for your cowpunchers, and if you drive 16 miles from the highway to reach the ranchhouse, even Texans would concede that you had a fair sized place.

The ranch of the Douglas Lake Cattle Company, commonly known as the Douglas Lake Ranch, satisfies these conditions. In addition they employed their own harness maker, had their own polo team, and started their own grasshopper control parties to keep these pests down before the Government took over the job. Ten thousand head of grade Herefords roam their fenced ranges, and even the Chinese cooks have private rooms. The days of the log bunkhouse and board bunks are gone on this up-to-date "spread"!

THE SYNDICATE

Back in the early '80's Joseph B. Greaves came to Victoria and organized a cattle-buying syndicate to supply the construction gangs of the C.P.R. with beef. In 1883 he and C. M. Beak of Chaperon Lake went into partnership in the ranch, business shortly after they bought all the property of the Douglas family on Douglas Lake. In '84 they transferred half of their interests to C. W. R. Thompson and W. C. Ward of Victoria, two members of the original cattle-buying syndicate. Thus the Douglas Lake Cattle Company came into being and it is still going strong. Greaves managed it until 1910, when he and others sold out to W. C. Ward. His son, Frank Ward, took over the management, which he continued until 1940, when Brian Chance, an Australian, became manager on the retirement of Mr. Ward.

LARGEST RANCH

When Frank Ward took over, he continued the expansion of the ranch property. Today they own outright almost 150,000 acres; have over 1,800 more under land lease, and hold grazing leases on 250,000 besides! All of this is first-class cattle range, "bunch grass country"; and bunch grass is wonderful cattle feed, as it cures on the stalk, unlike many varieties of grass, which must be cut and then cured. Their range remains the finest in Canada, because it has never been overstocked. Even though the Gang Ranch range is larger in acreage, it is doubtful if it would support as many cattle, being much inferior in quality.

Their range remains the finest in Canada, because it has never been overstocked. Even though the Gang Ranch range is larger in acreage, it is doubtful if it would support as many cattle, being much inferior in quality.

The Gang and the Douglas Lake are doubtless the two largest in the province; the Gang Ranch owning about 15,000 acres outright, but holding under grazing lease about 1,000,000 acres. The Douglas Lake, while owning over three times the amount the Gang does, falls far short in grazing leases. On the other hand, they have a great many more cattle; so which is the biggest depends on what is used as yard stick to measure the size; the range acreage or the cattle produced? Take your pick!

NEW PLACES

The home, or headquarters buildings of the Douglas Lake are between the north end of the lake and Sanctuary Lake. It is bigger than some towns. Besides the ranch buildings proper, there is a row of cottages for the married cowpunchers and other employees, and a school is being built. The company runs a store, and, of course, has various workshops, including a blacksmith shop, to do maintenance work on the large amount of equipment required to keep things going.

In early days, to reach the ranch one left the train at Spence's Bridge and took a horse-drawn stagecoach from there down through Merritt and Princeton. When he made this first trip he had to spend the night at a hotel in Spence's Bridge known as Clemis Place, and when he went in he found the bar full of miners, construction men and cowboys, busily engaged in lowering the available liquor supply. He had to sleep in a room containing eight grimy beds and put his coat over the pillow to keep his face clean!

Sixty years have made a vast difference both in the country and the customs of the people, but the big ranches are still run much as they were then. Cowpunchers, wearing chaps, still herd the cattle on the range; but they live more comfortably and get considerably higher pay. People in Victoria still buy beef, when they can afford it, but the old Northwest is being tamed; the ranches in the Okanagan raise fruit instead of meat, and, in short, civilization has arrived. Soon all the real old-timers will be gone, and only the names of the old-time cattle empires will recall the days of the open range, when men were cowboys and women were scarce.

You and Your Car

* * * * * *

By FREDERICK C. RUSSELL

Are relatives who treat you to dinner when you take them riding the kin you love to touch?

LET'S BE SPECIFIC

EXPERIENCED mechanics are not too pleased with some of the too general advice that is offered the motoring public by those well-meaning folk who do not realize what a complicated gadget this modern automobile continues to be. There is the usual suggestion to add water to the radiator when the motor has warmed up. That's good enough for older-type cooling systems, but if there is a pressure cap removal for water checking brakes the pressure and temporarily defeats the advantages of this system. Typical, too, is advice about rotating tires. Not all rear tires can be used on front wheels satisfactorily because of their special anti-skid tread. And many a tire that has a tread especially well suited for front wheel use should not be used on the rear.

JUST LEAKS OUT

Anyone who doubts that a lot of what passes for high oil consumption is really high oil leakage should observe the black line in the centre of concrete highways where cars travel fast, especially hills. All of this means that when the motor is really working a lot of oil is being forced out of the system. Much of this comes out the oil filler pipe as well as the crankcase vents. It may be due to excessive blow-by the piston rings or just clogged vents.

STOREHOUSE OF DATA

If you have not already spent an evening delving into Floyd Clymer's highly interesting and informative "Treasury of Early American Automobiles," be sure to schedule it. McGraw-Hill Publishing Company have given it a de luxe presentation and Clymer has arranged his material with a nice sense of interest and balance. Everything that thrilled, puzzled or worried the public from 1877 to 1925 is included, proving rather conclusively that nothing really is ever wholly new. A 1907 convertible, a metal roof in 1912, and push-button doors in 1914 easily prove it. The new volume contains a complete listing of all steam cars. Some of the data on Gasless Sundays, the Glidden Tours, electrics and advertising techniques are certain to strike a responsive chord with many readers.

The foreword is by James Melton, opera and radio star, and some of his private collection of old-time cars is pictured. Oddity is a statement on page 178 that the K.R.I.T. cars, built in Detroit from 1909 to 1916, used a swastika as a trade mark.

From My Organ Loft

By GRAHAM STEED

BY the time these notes appear in print the musical season 1950-51 will have been concluded, so far as public concert-giving is concerned. The Musical Festival which will commence tomorrow is of course a season in itself and doubtless will attract large numbers of people who will gall have the most widely differing motives for attending. There will be the competitors themselves, and their relatives, and the teachers will be able to enjoy the fruits of their labors by seeing their pupils carry off coveted awards, or have their hopes dashed by the three demons of mischance, nervousness, overexcitement and under-preparation; there will be people who have themselves participated in festivals of former years or in other cities, all quite erroneously agreeing that the present generation does not match up to the standards of the past, and there will be those who have no special interest in the performers but who enjoy the affair merely for what it is, a week of music and the fun of the game.

* * *

My own feeling about competitive festivals is probably a heresy to most of you, but I know well that most adjudicators will secretly agree with me. There is too much kindness to the losers, far too much praise to the winners, and a great deal less than justice is done to the works performed. It seems that to attract competitors (and their relations) to the competitions, every performer must receive a minimum of approximately 70 per cent of the marks available, and the system has to be worked something like this; each entrant gets a free 70 per cent of the marks for the risk he takes to his own and his teacher's reputation by entering, and the remaining 20 per cent (only 20 per cent, for marks over 90 per cent are very rare) are awarded by a carefully managed system of juggling between the number of entries, the quality of the performance and the gullibility of the public. Now all this is not an argument against the competitive element of the festival; far from it. It is only to show that the judges cannot, by the nature of things, award marks on a strictly accurate merit basis only. They have to flatter the winners without giving them swelled heads, and they have to humor the losers by making them feel they aren't quite so useless as they know them to be, and hand out modest doses of encouragement all round. From a judge's point of view, it is very tough going, for besides having to wrestle with the mathematical problem of equating the competitors within a prescribed one-fifth of the total marks, he has to act as public instructor and entertainer for three sessions daily, six days a week, with, in some places, hardly the time for a doughnut and a cup of coffee between the acts.

* * *

But from the public's point of view "everything in the garden is lovely" and they go on from year to year perpetuating the misapprehension that the most abysmal performance of a piece of music cannot be worth less than 70 per cent! Dear public and brave competitors, even on a good day Caruso often barely merited 70 per cent, and one could count on one hand the musical performances which are really in the 80-90 bracket. So do not be too easily misled by the wily adjudicator's marks or remarks—a good one can make a winner realize that he or he is only worth half-marks; that is what should make you work harder for that perfection which one knows is never quite attainable, but which is so well worth the striving. Nothing bores me so much as to be told that so-and-so was very highly praised by the adjudicators; implying that there really isn't much more for him to learn. Nothing is more true than that only the sternest professional and self-criticism and the most severe self-discipline can mould the career of any creative or reproductive artist. Instead of damning with faint praise, I would like to see all judges praising with very vigorous damns.

* * *

I hope that this year the adjudicators will take greater pains to demonstrate the composers' intentions in the various test pieces by pointing out the features which are not immediately apparent either to competitors or audience and will spend less time in publicly describing the obvious virtures and faults of the performers. That is what the written criticisms are meant to do, though of course it is wise to issue general warnings against faults of style and technique which if overlooked may be unwittingly copied by others. First class adjudicating should ensure that the test pieces are practised with even greater enthusiasm after the festival than they were before.

Next week I shall have something to say of the musical season 1950-51 in retrospect, and then I must begin the serious task of elucidating some of the possibly less known mysteries of the art of music . . . without being too technical, Mr. Editor.

May Ask King About Beard

British Army reservist John Beckett is contemplating writing King George in an attempt to save his magnificent black spade beard grown during the past nine months.

Recalled by the army for a fortnight's training during the Summer, Beckett was informed by the War Office that me must shave off his beard.

Beckett, a 35 year-old Londoner and an actor in civilian life, grew his beard to play a leading role in various pageants which are being staged in connection with Festival of Britain celebrations.

Now the problem of parting with his beard for the sake of a 15-day stay in the army has placed him in a dilemma.

"It is essential that I should have a beard. It is the most flourishing in our cast and really earned me a leading part.

"I think it would break my heart, after all the jeers and yells I have had to put up with while growing my beard, if I had to shave it off," Beckett added.

But the War Office is adamant. "Beckett is unlucky," said a spokesman. "That beard will have to come off before his feet touch the parade grounds.

"King's regulations are rigid—there must be no hair on the lower lip."

Ancient Ferries On B.C. Rivers

* * * * * *

Reaction Type Craft Are Still in Use

By L.G.T.

THE word ferry, to a Victorian, tends to bring to mind the boats running to Vancouver and Seattle, or perhaps craft of the type used on the Salt Spring and Mill Bay ferries. But to those of us that have roamed some of the less travelled roads of the Mainland, it calls up visions of strange catamaran-like boats used to cross rivers with a decided current, and most of our British Columbia rivers have just that. When a more or less minor road comes to a river which is wide enough to make putting in a bridge a major undertaking, a ferry is the answer.

As far as we know, the earliest British Columbia ferry was constructed at Yale, in 1859. In a contemporary account it is stated that it was large enough to carry twelve head of cattle at a time, and that a stout hempen cable had been strung across the river between two trees, on which a grooved pulley would run. This was undoubtedly a reaction ferry but of an earlier type, in which a scow was used rather than the two pontoons of the ones today.

STRANGE CRAFT

The reaction ferry is one that requires no power to operate; the flow of the stream does all the work, after the original installation is made. It is the opposite of a sailboat. Instead of the air in motion supplying the motive power, it is the water in motion; and inasmuch as the water is more reliable in that the current always flows in the same direction, whereas the wind may blow from any quarter, no steering device is required. Instead of a sail, a current board is fastened to extend down into the water, and instead of relying upon a keel or centreboard to keep from drifting sideways, the craft is fastened to a pully running on a cable extending across the river well above the surface.

MODERN TYPE

The modern type, consisting of a deck laid across two identical pontoons, is connected to the crossing cable by means of a rope running from the bow of one pontoon up through a pulley attached to the traveler which runs on the cable, down and several times around a winch on the deck, back through another pulley on the traveler, and then to the bow of the other pontoon. When the winch is turned, it draws one pontoon slightly upstream and allows the other to drift back an equal amount. This means that the craft is at an angle to the current, and as the water flows against the current board, pushes the craft sideways across the stream. To return to the other side, the winch is turned the opposite way, which reverses the angle with the current, and the ferry is pushed back again. They are the only boats that normally travel sideways, like a crab.

LARGE FLEET

The Department of Public Works operated 24 of these ferries on various rivers throughout the province, from Creston, on the Kootenay to Hazelton on the Skeena. The ferryman is paid a monthly salary and usually lives at one end of his route, adjacent to the landing. When cars are driven aboard, the engine must be stopped and the brakes set before the ferry leaves the landing. Also, heavy chains are hooked across the deck in front and behind the load of cars. This has been the practice ever since some people were drowned owing to children in a car releasing the brakes while the ferry was in mid-stream, at Isle Pierre, on the Nachako.

BEFORE BRIDGES

Less than a hundred years ago there were no bridges worthy of the name in the province; and, just as fingers were made before forks, so ferries were made before bridges, at least in British Columbia. There was a ferry across the Thompson known as Cook's Ferry, where Spences Bridge is now, but it was discontinued when Spence built the bridge in 1864. In that same year the ferryman at the ferry across the Homathko River was massacred by Indians along with seventeen others. In 1858, Harrison P. Eayrs was granted the right to operate a ferry across the Fraser near the present site of the Alexandra Bridge in the canyon, with the proviso that it would be in operation by October in that year.

ON PONTOONS

The present type, with the deck laid across the pontoons, was first introduced early in the present century. The pontoons were first constructed of wood, and some of these still survive; but they are being replaced by steel ones as they wear out. They appear to be peculiar to British Columbia, at least as far as Canada is concerned. Also, the early ones used a heavy hemp cable strung across the river between two suitable trees. Now, a steel wire cable is used, running across between two towers, and anchored to heavy concrete bases set in the ground.

Let us hope that they will remain for many years, for there is no better way to cross a river than on a ferry. The smooth motion that is hardly noticeable; the gentle rippling of the water past the boat; the shore one has left getting more remote while the far shore comes steadily closer; all this gives a feeling of peace and quiet all too rarely experienced in the modern world. Besides, the pipe-smoking ferryman will regale you with tales of the countryside while you cross, after the manner of nautical types the world over.

My Garden

By BARNEY McKINLEY

Last week I mentioned some of the troubles attendant on just getting the seeds into place in a garden.

This week the situation worsened.

For one thing I seem to have lost track of just what is where and can't tell the vegetables from the weeds.

I am hoping the vegetables will grow in straighter lines than the weeds. This should afford me a clue. Until then all I can do is keep my thumbs crossed. The green ones.

Actually I thought I had the situation taped. When I planted the garden stuff in my 50 x 50-foot acreage I made a chart of the ground showing clearly what seed was in which row.

Unfortunately I stepped on the chart with a muddy boot the first time I watered the garden and mixed the rows of corn in with beans.

This is called succotash they tell me; though stronger language seems called for.

But I'm through lending comfort to the enemy. Critics are invited to come and stand in the shade of the rhubarb—doing very well—and watch McKinley's good earth sprout the stuff of life.

They'll see plants growing all right. That's in spite of the fact a couple of days ago the yard looked pretty much like a hard clay tennis court.

It didn't seem possible a tender vine could break the surface.

Now there's undeniably rows of tiny growing things radishes, lettuce and cress at a guess, showing above the ground. It's darned exciting and satisfying.

As a matter of fact on the present evidence alone they ought to drink to me in the wine of the house. Which will be rhubarb.

When you go to a party, did you know that —it's good manners to arrive at the time specified in the invitation, not earlier or later? And leave at a reasonable hour, whether others do or not. Sometimes everybody knows that they should go home, but they all wait for somebody else to make the first move. Why not you? . . . instead of wearing out your welcome and making the host's or hostess' parents irate. "A reasonable hour" depends on your age and what's customary in your community, probably ranging from 11 to 12 p.m.

—it's quite-wise to chat with other guests at the party, whether you've been introduced or not.

—if you talk a while with other guests without waiting for an introduction you'll be smooth and introduce yourself . . . "I'm Joan Smith. You go to Central High, too, don't you?"

—going alone into a room full of strangers (or even people you know) is less gruesome if you head straight for a definite objective—your hostess, somebody you know or a certain chair. Lost confidence is more likely to come back and embarrassment less likely to make you feel awkward if you know where you're going and put your mind on getting there.

—good manners' rule is that you entertain those who have entertained you . . . a return gesture of hospitality should come from boys, too. If you're a boy, it's up to you to give a party, inviting those who have invited you to theirs. Or invite the girl to a movie, dance, or some other affair. If you don't want to entertain her, don't accept her invitation. Men have social obligations, too.

Sitting on the Fence

Being a brochure on the beauties of Britain written for the benefit of foreign visitors by N. Gubbins, Esq.

THOSE visiting Britain for the first time may wonder at the enthusiasm displayed by those already acquainted with her charms.

After a few days here, they will wonder no longer.

Here is a country, not only with an infinite variety of scenery, but a bewildering variety of climate.

The scenery ranges from the mountains of Scotland and North Wales, once a training ground for commandoes, where you can still pick up a lost hand grenade and blow yourself to bits, to the flat eastern half of the country, where the marshy ground and keen, searching, moisture-laden winds will cripple you with rheumatism.

* * *

As for the climate, you can start half-naked for a walk on a hot June morning, run into a blizzard at midday and be in bed with pneumonia by dinner time.

You will then have the opportunity of taking advantage of the free medical service for all, including foreigners.

Perhaps, more than anything, it is her people who make Britain irresistible to visitors.

Their light-hearted approach to life and living brings a ready response from the stranger in their midst.

He will see them in their ordinary daily life in town and countryside, perhaps plying some ancient craft, such as filling in football coupons, or selling stolen goods in the black market.

More likely they will be mooning about in utility clothes, staring into half-empty shops at things they can't afford, forming queues, muttering about meat and cursing the Government.

* * *

He will be struck also by their natural beauty and dignity; the flashing smile of welcome disclosing the distinctive buck teeth of the upper classes and the shining new dentures of the workers.

Also by the blistered backs of trousered women on holiday, sucking synthetic ice cream, and their tall escorts in open-necked shirts and shorts, displaying narrow, hairy chests and long, hairy legs.

In this wonderful country you will also have the privilege of tasting the world-famous English cooking.

But come and see for yourself. It is certain you will never forget us.

CONVERSATION

"I have got on well in the world, and am now in a position of some standing. My wife has remained backward-socially. It makes me bad tempered."—Letter to a woman columnist.

Well, that's the end of that.

End of what, dear?

My chances of promotion. I suppose you knew it was the manager who came to tea?

Why, of course, dear. You told me.

Then why did you have to tell him how you wash the curtains?

You are to make conversation, don't you, dear?

Is it making conversation to tell him I wear holes in my socks in a week?

Somebody's got to say something.

Or that you can't sleep because of my snoring?

Nor can I.

Or that you don't believe in married couples sleeping apart because it's the beginning of the end?

So it is.

If you must have shrimps for tea, it is necessary to tell him you eat the whole shrimp, eyes and all?

So I do.

Or that your father drinks his tea out of a saucer? • And so do you when we haven't got company?

You ashamed of my father?

I wonder you didn't tell him your mother's stopped taking in washing now I've got a rise.

I did when you was out of the room.

YOUR PERSONALITY

What kind of a person are you? What are your faults? What are you fit for?

After no research at all, and giving the matter no more than a moment's consideration, Dr. Gubbins, the Fleet Street quack, is able to answer all these intriguing questions.

His brilliant discoveries have led him to believe that most of us can be classified into five personality groups. The Assertive, The Stable, The Spontaneous, The Persistent, and The Sensitive.

If you belong to the first group, you are the kind of man who is hated in office, factory, Parliament, the armed forces, and at home.

You will fight your way to the top over the bodies of less aggressive, but often more talented people.

According to your abilities you may become a dictator, a business executive, or a regimental sergeant-major.

You will go to your grave unmourned and unloved, except by your mother, who may have secret misgivings herself.

If you belong to the Stable type (Group 2), you can be written down as a dull, hard-working, conscientious mediocrity.

You will never go far forward, never go far back. You are as reliable as a rock, and about as exciting. You weigh your words and count your change.

If married, you would drive any intelligent woman mad in a month.

Old Homes and Families

By Jim Nesbitt

ONE hundred years ago this month the 105-foot barque Tory dropped anchor in Esquimalt Harbor.

Historians are unable to agree on the exact date; it was either May 10 or May 14.

She was only 105 feet long, 25 feet wide and of 483 tons, the Tory, but 105 passengers were crammed into her and they had been six months at sea, around Cape Horn.

The Tory brought a notable list of adventurous people who became among our first pioneers and founded big families whose descendants by the hundreds are still in these parts.

NOTABLE COMPANY

Let us look at that passenger list of a century ago: William

MARY ANNE IRVINE
(Mrs. David Laing)

John Macdonald, who became mayor of Victoria and a senator; Capt. and Mrs. Langford, the first settlers at Colwood, and their five daughters; Capt. and Mrs. Cooper; Mr. and Mrs. John Irvine; William Newton, who married a daughter of John Tod; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Blinkhorn and their 14-year-old niece, Martha Cheney, who married Capt. H. B. Ella; Miss Cameron, a niece of Governor Douglas.

Senator Macdonald, in his memoirs, gives us brief glimpses into the voyage: "Very monotonous sailing week after week without seeing any signs of life, besides some sea birds and porpoises . . . Although the voyage was long and tedious, I had no wish to leave the ship and so many friends were made on the long voyage."

But this story is about John Irvine and his wife, from the Orkney Islands, a stout-hearted Scottish couple who were to make good in the New World.

PORK AND TACK

Their son, John Irvine, who died at Cordova Bay a few years ago, wrote his reminiscences when he was more than 80. He noted that the Tory passengers "lived on hard tack and salt pork . . . I mustn't forget to mention they had a ration of rum every day."

He said that his parents "came out as servants of the Hudson's Bay Company—the slary was 20 pounds a year and board, and as money was pretty scarce in those days I suppose it looked quite a handsome sum."

Irvine had to remain in the service of the Hudson's Bay Company for two years. He and his wife lived in the fort and there their first children were born. Irvine, however, had no intention of signing up for another term of service under the company. He longed for freedom, to be on his own, to till his own soil and fatten his own cattle.

A LAND OWNER

John Irvine, Jr., wrote: "My parents went to the head of Portage Inlet and that is where I was born. Later they took up 100 acres in the Cedar Hill district about three miles from the fort. The farm my parents took up was called Rose Bank . . . they gradually acquired more acreage until they had over 300 acres and all was what you would call wild land."

Six children were born to John Irvine, Sr., and his wife—William, John, Mary Anne, who married Capt. David Laing, well-known shipbuilder who gave his name to Laing's Cove in Esquimalt Harbor; Jessie, who was Mrs. William White; Christina, who was Mrs. Sam Whittaker, and Margaret.

They are all dead now but Miss Margaret. She still lives on the old family acres at Cedar Hill, a stone's throw from the farmhouse where she was born. She was 86 last Valentine's Day, and still she does a good day's housework. She lives with her nephew-in-law, C. Fred Dawson; his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Brown, and their three small children, Barbara, Peter and Paul.

A LOVING GRANNY

Miss Margaret Irvine has mothered three generations of small boys and girls—the sons and daughters of her sister, Mrs. Laing, who died young; the sons and daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Dawson (Miss Laing), and now the children of Mr. and Mrs. Brown. To them all she has been a beloved grannie and they have given her a love no less than to their own mothers. She is today an important part of the Dawson-Brown household, helping with the baking and the washing and feeding the chickens and taking her turn at weeding the garden, where once she helped with the hay on her father's old farm.

She has many memories—of the Indians who beached their canoes near Mount Douglas and then walked through trails in the woods to Victoria; of the wolves that moaned in the nearby hills and one night slaughtered 20 of her father's sheep, of her mother, baking for her big family at the open fireplace, of the friends who drove out from town by horse and buggy and often stayed the night, of big Christmas parties when no one ever did know how many slept under the roof.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN IRVINE

IN THE FIELDS of the John Irvine, Sr., farm—the old homestead to the right.

There were so many nieces and nephews that Aunt Margaret never could keep track of them. There were, for instance, the seven daughters of her sister, Mrs. White. Rose Bank Farm was always overrun with youngsters, who insisted that Aunt Margaret play with them in the orchards and climb nearby Mount Douglas. So it was no wonder Aunt Margaret never found time to leave the old homestead except twice—when she went to the Mainland to visit friends. And she has never to this day been as far up the Island as Duncan.

Rose Bank Farm was always particularly happy when some of the passengers from the old Tory came calling. The Blinkhorns and Mrs. Ella and her children often went there and so did the Macdonalds, from their castle-like home, Armadale, in James Bay. John Irvine remained a humble farmer; W. J. Macdonald became a noted and rich citizen, but always they remained friends, cemented by that long voyage to the New World around the Horn in the crowded, uncomfortable little Tory.

John Irvine, Jr., wrote in his memoirs: "Senator Macdonald and his wife were well-liked by everybody. He always drove a fine team of high steppers and a fancy carriage and about twice a year they would drive out to the Irvine home and have tea and scones with the old folks."

NEW GENERATION

When it became time for John Jr. to be married, his father gave him some of the original acres and a new farmstead went up, not far from the old folks' home. Then, about 1912, John Jr. built the fine stone house that stands today, a landmark, on the hill just to the west of Shelbourne Street and Ruby Road.

John Jr., in his memoirs, didn't say much about life at the Rose Bank Farm, except that as a boy he was always fishing and hunting and was a crack shot, so that he received the nickname "Long Gun."

Not far away from Rose Bank was the old Blenkinsop farm, which was taken over, in 1868, by a Mr. Jackson. John Jr. wrote: "Mr. Jackson used to hire me to help him drive sheep from the farm to Spring Ridge, where Goodacre had a big slaughter house. I never forgot the sandwiches that Mrs. Jackson put up for me whenever I was driving sheep—potted meats or headcheese and always a whole pie; well, it is a fact that a workingman would have a real job to eat it all and I always got one dollar for the job of driving sheep."

OLD VICTORIA

Another notation in the Irvine memoirs is of interest: "At the time of which I write Victoria was pretty wild and woodsy, no streets that could be called streets. In fact, mud roads and they had taken a chance on a wild new land, and they had won, for they had found contentment and fulfillment of their dreams of freedom and they knew they had contributed their share to this new land.

AT ROSE BANK

The spirit of John Irvine and his wife live on at Rose Bank today, in their youngest child, Miss Margaret, and in their great-granddaughter, young Mrs. Brown, who invites every caller to stay for a meal while she takes wondrous smelling bread out of the oven and beats up a cake and looks after three small children and somehow manages to keep up her singing and piano and does her part in the work of St. Aidan's Church, which her great-grandparents attended so long ago.

And Aunt Margaret—Grannie—when she's tired, which isn't often, sits in a kitchen corner and the sun streams through the window onto her worn hands, folded placidly in her lap, and in her eyes is a look of peace, for she has that richest of all possessions of the old—the knowledge that she's loved and wanted and useful, that she'll end her days on the acres where she was born.

THE JOHN IRVINE, JR., HOMESTEAD on his father's acres—from here to the big stone house.

Home of the Razor Back Clam

By GEORGE NICHOLSON

PORTION OF THE BEACH at about half tide, with Rose Spit in the distance.

ACCOMPANYING photograph shows Rose Spit, Queen Charlotte Islands, section of extensive broad sandy beaches peculiar to the area and a view of the terrain lying immediately inland, all typical of the northeastern portion of these islands.

FINE BEACHES

Rose Spit itself forms the lower shoulder at the entrance to Masset Inlet, largest waterway in the Islands, and on which the townships of Massett and Port Clements are located.

The white sandy beaches, a quarter of a mile wide and so hard a car can be driven without leaving tire marks. During the war certain sections were set aside for wheel-equipped-plane emergency landing strips and refuelling points. Commencing a few miles from Massett they extend the 25-mile stretch east to Rose Spit, round that point and on again in seemingly endless expanse 20 miles or so down the coastline in the direction of Skidegate Inlet, where Skidegate village and Queen Charlotte City are located. By far the most extensive stretches of beach to be found anywhere on the British Columbia Coast, broken only here and there by a slight depression where some small stream flows into the sea.

RAZOR CLAMS

From Rose Spit west to Massett and it is along this 25-mile stretch the most extensive beds of razor clams in British Columbia are to be found and a cannery at Masset.

The aristocrat of the clam family and different in shape, size, color and all other characteristics to the common clam we know in clam chowder, steamed butter clams and clam nectar, Mr. Razor Clam is in a class by himself, his meat being pure white, tender and of a taste different altogether. Fair comparison might be baby beef from bull.

Its name is derived from the fact that its shell is elongated and supposed to resemble a folded old fashioned straight razor, though actually looks more like the case for spectacles, an inch or inch and a half wide and from five to eight inches long.

DIGGING METHOD

Both speed and high technique are required in digging them. Hunting would be a more appropriate term as they are only found at extreme low tide and one has about an hour before the incoming tide covers up their holes again. Alarmed by the approach of footsteps, they burrow in the sand faster than the novice can dig, and by way of making it still more difficult it goes down in a slanting direction. The ordinary variety of clam stays put where you find him and but a few inches in the sand.

Whites and Indians alike join in the "hunt" while the short but profitable season lasts. All work on a piece-work basis and cannery trucks not only gather the harvest but convey the diggers to and from their work. A tide table book is a must for these people and gas lamps are used when state of tide necessitates digging at night.

LOW-LYING AREA

Extending for miles immediately inland from these beaches the terrain is practically flat with the highest ridges scarcely 100 feet above sea level, mostly covered with stunted spruce, here and there open muskeg spaces, many small lakes of various size and little streams. Owing to its marshy nature, the greater portion of this area is inaccessible to man, so the home and breeding grounds of thousands of geese that remain here the year round. There being no cougar, wolves or other predatory animals in the Charlottes, deer and elk are exceedingly plentiful and roam the drier parts of these regions.

This low lying expanse, many thousands of acres in extent, actually represents but a very small portion of the area comprising the Queen Charlotte Islands as a whole, the greater part of which is mountainous, heavily timbered and sparsely populated save for a few scattered settlements, isolated logging camps, fish canneries and an occasional farm, with the entire length of its west coast still in its natural undeveloped state, hardly a living soul its entire length except for a few fishermen in the Summer months.

"STAMP PACKET"

By R.M. Winfield

THE United States has at last announced the subjects of the four commemoratives it proposes to issue this year. On May 30 the first will appear and will be issued at Norfolk, Virginia, depicting the final encampment of the United Confederate Veterans. On dates yet to be specified, the following three stamps will be issued: (1) 100th anniversary of the settlement of the State of Nevada; (2) anniversary of State of Colorado; (3) anniversary of American Chemical Society.

* * *

It is timely to remind Victorians that the Pacific International Exhibition, sponsored by the Northwest Federation of Stamp Clubs and which embraces all stamp societies in the States of Washington and Oregon, also British Columbia and Alberta, will be held in the Empress Hotel ballroom on the dates of May 19, 20 and 21. The exhibition will be opened at 3 p.m. by Sir Frederick Maze, K.C.M.G., K.C.B., on May 19. The last exhibition held in Victoria by this organization was in 1938, all subsequent ones being held in various Canadian and United States cities, Vancouver, New Westminster, Seattle, Portland, Tacoma, Bellingham and Spokane. During the war no exhibitions were held.

* * *

No charge for admission will be made, but those purchasing programs will get a voucher making them eligible for one of the door prizes. A hearty response has been given by local citizens to the composition of the program and it has also received endorsement from as far away as Boston, Toronto and Winnipeg.

At the exhibition will be the cream of local and United States exhibits and we can assure even the non-collector that he will be amply rewarded by attending. The star exhibit will be exhibited by K. Galeski of Winnipeg; Canada No. 32 (Scott's which is the 2c large head with laid lines. So far, only two copies of this stamp have come to light, one with several defects, but the one to be exhibited here is in fine condition. It is probable that not more than one or two sheets of this stamp were ever issued on laid paper. There may be others, though this is not likely after 83 years from the time of issue. Victoria boasts some of the finest collections in Canada and a study of these will give beginners a good idea of how a stamp collection should be written up and displayed. The two-cent stamp on laid paper, mentioned above, is valued at $3,000 alone and combined with other exhibits there will probably be in the neighborhood of $250,000. Needless to say, the entire exhibit will be under close supervision both day and night. The Greater Victoria Philatelic Society is joining hands with the Vancouver Island Philatelic Society in staging this show.

* * *

We notice that one of the leading British publications devoted to stamps has given space to announcing the exhibition but, of course, has fallen into the usual error of stating that it will take place in Vancouver. Possibly the name Vancouver Island Philatelic Society may be misleading to outsiders, but considering that the editor and owner of the paper visited Victoria and stayed at the Empress, where he was dined and wined by the two local societies, the error is inexcusable.

Potsdam Pianist Barred at Door

The young soldier in corporal's uniform approached the stage door of Constitution Hall in Washington and tried to enter. The doorman barred the way and told him to go around the corner and buy his ticket at the box office like anybody else.

"But I'm List," the soldier protested.

"Oh yeah," snapped the doorman, "and I'm Paderewski. Now, scram!"

Fortunately, a member of the orchestra arrived and explained that the soldier was indeed Eugene List, brilliant American-born pianist, who was to be guest soloist with the orchestra by special permission of the army authorities.

In addition to having the same surname of the famous composer, Eugene List is destined for a permanent spot in music's Who's Who in his own right, for he added a colorful footnote to the history of World War II where he acquired the nickname of the "Potsdam Pianist."

It was in July of 1945 that List then stationed in Paris, was summoned to Potsdam to appear at a state dinner of the Big Three—Truman, Churchill and Stalin—to play a program of concert music.

TURNED PAGES

He succeeded in breaking the diplomatic ice with a program ranging from the Tschaikoesky Concerto to the Missouri Waltz. Before the conference was over, he was asked to play four more times and on the last occasion he had the unique honor of having President Truman turn pages for him.

The war interrupted a career that started brilliantly after the pianist from Philadelphia won several musical scholarships and the great Stokowski himself incited the slim, blond youth to be guest artist with Maestro's Philadelphia Orchestra. He appeared in concert all over the country and was a great favorite on radio.

With the advent of the war, he volunteered. Whenever he could, he put on special shows for servicemen. While his specialty was "long-haired" music, he did his best to satisfy everybody and so he added jazz and boogie woogie numbers to his repertoire.

"Billy the Scout"

A HUNDRED years and more ago everyone who lived in Hamilton, Ont., or on the Niagara Peninsula between Lake Ontario and Lake Erie, knew about Billy Green, the Canadian Paul Revere. He was the boy who saved the peninsula from the American invaders and it was because of his all-night ride that the Canadian soldiers won the Battle of Stoney Creek.

Paul Revere, as all American schoolchildren know, was the man who rode on horseback from Boston to Lexington, warning the American patriots that the British were coming. Every year in Boston a young man in Paul Revere costume makes the famous ride, to recall this historic story to young Americans. Billy Green's ride was much more dangerous, and the rider was not a man but a 17-year-old boy. Yet few Canadians today have ever heard of Billy Green.

Billy was born near Stoney Creek in 1791, the first white child born in that district. When he grew up there was no war on the peninsula and young Billy had lots of time to explore the countryside. He became an expert at woodcraft and people used to say that he could crawl like a snake, climb trees like a squirrel, chatter like a chipmunk, and imitate any bird or animal that made the forest its home. This ability later made it possible for him to outwit the American soldiers and warn the Canadian and British forces of their danger.

On June 5, 1813, Billy and his brother saw the advancing American army arrive at Stoney Creek. The British-Canadian soldiers were in a camp just west of Hamilton, at a place called Burlington Heights. To reach the camp Billy had to pass through the American lines. First he crept and crawled through the woods to the home of his sister's husband who had been a prisoner of the Americans and knew their password. Then, mounting his brother's horse he began his long ride to the Canadian camp where he informed the commanding officer of his peril.

Billy also told the officers how many soldiers there were and how they were stationed. The commander decided to attack the American camp that same night while the invaders would be resting.

Through the woods, in the dark of night, Billy Green led 705 Canadian troops to the attack against 3,450 Americans. The invaders, completely surprised, were defeated, with 200 killed, 240 wounded and 125 taken prisoner; the rest fled. The Canadian losses were 80 killed and 150 wounded.

The Battle of Stoney Creek brought the end of the American threat to Niagara Peninsula. The Americans withdrew to the Niagara frontier and never returned. Billy the Scout had made possible an important victory, as important to Canada as the skirmish at Lexington was to the American colonists. His name should never be forgotten.
